U. S. Accepts Trojanovsky, New Russian Ambassador

Soviet Envoy to Arrive Soon; Skvirsky Stays
as Counselor.

Litvinoff Labors
On Debt Program

"Preservation of Peace"
Theme Dominates in New Agreement.

By Kendall Foss.
Alexander Trojanovsky was proposed officially and accepted yesterday as first Soviet Ambassador to the United States.
Boris Skvirsky, "unofficial official" Soviet representative in Washington for the last 12 years, will be the first counselor of the embassy and charge d'affaires until his ambassador arrives, it was learned. Trojanovsky was expected to leave Moscow within a few days.
Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff spent yesterday resting and driving through the Shenandoah Valley. He will resume negotiations at the State Department today, going into the debts and claims and laying the foundations for future trade.

Expert on Trade, Orient.
Confirmation of Trojanovsky's appointment, forecast in The Post, adds one more significant bit to the weight of evidence that "the preservation of peace" occupied a foremost place in the minds of the recognition negotiators.

For Alexander Antonovich Trojanovsky spent five years as ambassador in Tokyo, only returning to Moscow last January. He knows his Far East. He also is thoroughly familiar with Soviet trade practices and needs, for before going to Tokyo he spent several years as chairman of the State Trading Trust. This, too, is a quality desirable in the first Soviet ambassador if the numerous commercial possibilities are to be realized to the full.

Kalinin Injuncts Peace Talk.
"Preservation of peace," occurring in both President Roosevelt's and Litvinoff's letters effecting recognition, can not help meaning the Far East. It is no secret that of all visible war clouds the one hanging over Manchukuo is the blackest. Fighting there, this particular threat to peace is inevitably of closer concern to both Washington and Moscow than other disturbing possibilities.

Ohio Jail Raid Suspect Seized

Held in Chicago as One of Sheriff's Killers in Freeing Chief.

Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP)—A man identified by fingerprints as Harry Copeland, 33, alias John Stanton, was seized by Ohio authorities as a member of the band that invaded a jail at Lima, Ohio, and killed a sheriff to free their leader, John Dillinger, Indiana desperado, was arrested here today.

The arrest came after squad cars were notified to be on the lookout for a man of Copeland's description who had been seen flourishing a revolver as he sat in an automobile with a woman.
Police said Copeland was wanted with four others for the slaying of Sheriff Jess Sarber when a gang appeared at the jail several weeks ago and liberated Dillinger, held in Ohio on bank robbery charges. Sarber was beaten to death by blows from a gun butt.

14 British Miners Killed in Blast

Chesterfield, Eng., Nov. 19 (AP)—Fourteen men were killed in an explosion in a coal mine near here today. Seventeen others were injured.
After three hours of feverish digging, a rescue squad found the 14 entombed miners dead from fire damps. Rescuers said the roof of the mine crashed behind the men as they stood at the coal face, completely cutting off escape.

Prince George motored from Chatsworth today to offer his sympathy.
The attempt caused an outcry among exercising prisoners, but several shots fired into the air from guard towers quickly restored order.

Guards Block Prison Break in Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Nov. 19 (AP)—A rush of guards with drawn pistols today thwarted an attempt by several convicts to escape over a wall of the Eastern State Penitentiary by means of a crudely made ladder.

Loss was estimated at $100,000. The house was built by Chief Justice John Marshall for his eldest son and remodeled and extended by Doeller. Eight Killed, Scores Injured In Spain Riots

Disorder Reigns in All Areas as Citizens Go to Polls.

Madrid, Nov. 19 (AP)—At least eight persons were reported killed and scores wounded in disorders over Spain today as the republic conducted its first federal election under the constitution. Open fights between radicals and conservatives occurred before the polls closed at 4 p. m.

The first national election open to Spanish women, early returns indicated widespread Rightist and Radical Republican victories over the Socialists.
About 80 per cent of the electorate was estimated to have voted. The slowness of tabulations kept definite knowledge of the results from a tense republic. The government's immediate attention was upon a threat of Leftist and Extremist uprisings.

Communists Open Fire.
The first reported death was in Seville rioting. Judge Juan Alonso was said to have been killed, and another man badly wounded when about 200 Communists opened fire on a group of Rightists.
The most violent disorders were reported in two clashes.

One was killed and three were injured in an election clash at Valencia and another was killed at the village of Ferrera.
At Galarria, near Bilbao, a priest, Jose Urbiondo, was asserted to have been probably fatally wounded by Socialists who attempted to prevent him from casting his ballot. The priest took a pistol from an assailant and, although shot in the abdomen, insisted on voting before being taken to the hospital.
In a clash at Castro Urdiales, between Bilbao and Santander, Nationalists were said to have poured a volley of shots into Socialist quarters, and two persons were killed.

Lynching Attempted.
In Madrid, the capital, a crowd attempted to lynch an unidentified man, who yelled "Long Live the King" in a central plaza. The man escaped.

A serious clash in Madrid occurred when a group of Leftists attacked Rightist adherents, wounding a campaigner and a guard who tried to assist him.
Barcelona reported two or three regiments of soldiers were being closely watched by guards, fearing a movement among the Leftist non-commissioned officers and soldiers. Extra guards were placed at military headquarters.

Priceless Mosaics, Centuries Old, Uncovered in Turkey

Istanbul, Nov. 19 (AP)—Priceless mosaics from the Mosque of St. Sophia were unveiled today by Thomas Whittemore, director of the American Byzantine Institute, in the presence of the Turkish minister of education.

As a result of two years of industrious cleaning and restoration, the sixth and ninth century mosaics were presented to the world today exactly as they were created. The masterpieces have long been hidden from public view.
The greatest ninth century mosaic in the world was disclosed above the Naoin portal. It represents Christ seated on a sumptuous

Flames Trap Servants; Two Hurt in Flight

Holding his mother's jewel box, William E. Doeller, jr., 9, slid down a rope of knotted sheets early yesterday and escaped from flames that destroyed the Doeller home at Orleans, near Warrenton.

The house, built by Chief Justice John Marshall, and the furnishings were valued at $100,000. Two servants were injured escaping from the blaze.
After sliding to the ground, the boy became frightened and ran. He was found some time later by a stable boy a half mile from the ruins.
Mr. and Mrs. Doeller were in Washington and the boy was alone with the servants. Hans Stangl, the butler, was awakened by flames when flames started in the basement near the furnace.
Stangl awakened the other servants upstairs. Fannie Versino, a maid, was sleeping near the boy's room. She tied sheets together and lowered them from a second-story window, as the stairs were burning.

Katherine Lynch, a chambermaid, started down the knotted sheets first, lost her grip, fell, and broke her ankle.

Another Boy Hurt.
William, jr., then went safely down the rope, taking his mother's jewels. Other servants escaped by jumping or sliding down the sheets. Frank Phillips, kitchen boy, suffered a broken arm when he jumped. Both the injured servants were taken to the Faugner Hospital in Warrenton.

The Doeller home, "Prospect Hill," was connected with a telephone exchange, which is closed after 8 p. m. and on Sundays. A stable boy had to drive 11 miles to Warrenton to give the alarm, and the Warrenton Fire Department responded. When news of the fire was telephoned to Doeller in

Gold Mine Brings $30,000 at Auction

Bellingham, Wash., Nov. 19 (AP)—The boundary Red Mountain gold mine, in Whatcom County, reputed to have produced a million dollars in gold since 1900, was sold Saturday for $30,000 at public auction.

The purchaser was Ross J. Hohl, of Bellingham, who acted as agent for George Wingfield, Nevada capitalist, who recently obtained a judgment of $221,574 against the property. The judgment represented money advanced the mine operators by Wingfield over a period of years.

U.S. Budget Cut Stirs Workers To Plan Appeal

Backed by Labor, Fight Will Be Carried to House Group.

An increase over budget estimates to provide for 100 per cent maintenance of the Federal pay roll will be sought before the House Appropriations Committee by organized Federal employee groups, with the support of the American Federation of Labor.

Meanwhile, a campaign for restoration of the 15 per cent slash is gaining headway.
The appeal to the House was planned yesterday, when it became known budget estimates will allow only $1,700,000,000 for ordinary government operations, 32 per cent less than current appropriations.
E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employees, immediately denounced the budgetary slash as "a reduction by pulling purse strings, the most brutal method of all."

"Elimination of unnecessary functions could be understood and condoned," he said, "but this apparently provides for the same amount of Government service with less money to keep it going."

There is no justification for maintaining a personnel and failing to appropriate for 100 per cent of the pay roll."

Has Labor's Support.
Babcock's organization not only will go before the House Appropriations Committee, but it will have the support of the American Federation of Labor, which is on record against slashing appropriations below pay roll requirements, he pointed out.

House hearings on the first Roosevelt budget will get under way the first week in December, when the Independent Offices subcommittee, headed by Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat, Virginia), will consider estimates for the Government's independent establishments.

The independent offices bill last session served as a vehicle for the drastic economy act rider. Any revision of the economy act is likely to be embodied in this bill. For that reason, the fury of Federal employee opposition is likely to center around the independent offices measure rather than the big supply bills that follow.

Cuts Tamed Wasteful.
In addition to American Federation of Government Employees' opposition to threatened budget cuts, the rival National Federation of Federal Employees yesterday warned that "budget drafters and the Congress must take full note of the unusual and untoward conditions which have arisen in the Federal service during the recent past."

"They must take action to assure against perpetuation of curtailments which have proven wasteful, if not dangerous, in their effects," stated

Italy Likely To Drop Out Of League

Fascist Press Cites Four Major Powers Now
Nonadherent.

Grand Council to Map
Course at Meeting Called Dec. 5.

Rome, Nov. 19 (AP)—A strong suggestion that Italy might quit the League of Nations was published today in three Italian newspapers, one of them Premier Mussolini's Popolo d'Italia.
The Corriere Della Sera, of Milan, and the Gazzetta Del Popolo, of Turin, said editorially that the Fascist grand council would be convened December 5 to "examine Italy's relations with the league in view of the departure of Japan and Germany and the fact that the United States and Russia are not members."

The grand council is the highest constituted body in the kingdom.

League Called Absurd.
Mussolini's Popolo did not mention the League of Nations by name, but said the grand council would discuss Il Duce's recent references to the international situation in his speech before the national council of corporations, in which he said the league had lost its effectiveness and "its very principle is absurd."

The Gazzetta significantly said that the grand council already had discussed the league in relation to the failure of the disarmament conference.

The articles in the two papers published in northern Italy, which are geographically closed to Geneva, terminated a three weeks' campaign these papers had directed against the league.

The Italian press has charged that the league is ridden with intrigue and incapable of making a decision or enforcing one.

In some quarters, however, the press campaign was regarded as an effort to shift the disarmament conversations from Geneva to Rome.

French Reseased.
It was understood that Premier Mussolini assured the French Ambassador to Italy, Count DeChambrun, in a conference last night that Italy's situation was unchanged with regard to the league.

Well-informed circles indicated the belief that the French Ambassador and Mussolini did not discuss a possible four-power meeting at Rome, but confined their conversation to the situation as it now exists, and Italy's reaction to it.

The Fascist Grand Council will also decide at its forthcoming meeting what payments Italy will make to the United States on the $1,250,000 of interest on debts due the U. S. It was believed in financial quarters that Italy will make another token payment, as she did last June.

Tries to Cook, Child, 7, Dies

Girl Is Wrapped in Flames
as She Leans Over Gas Stove.

A childish desire to learn to cook yesterday took the life of little Phyllis Hoover, 7, whose clothing was ignited by gas burner.
Phyllis had two ambitions—to cook and to dance. In the latter, she was a prodigy and was to have made her debut Friday at a local theater.

In cooking she was just a neophyte, but she wanted to learn. So yesterday, after Sunday school, she decided to try. Her mother had placed the matches out of her reach.

Phyllis climbed a chair to reach the matches, which were placed over the gas range in her home, 208 Ninth street northeast. In some manner she touched a gas burner. Her clothes were in flames.
Her shrieks were heard by her mother, who was on the third floor of the house, with Phyllis' baby brother, Malcolm, in her arms. Her mother rushed to her daughter, and frantically beat out the flames with a fur coat.
Phyllis was taken to Casualty Hospital. The flames had burned her entire body. She begged for medicine to ease her pain, but death brought succor.

Only Saturday, her grandmother, Mrs. Emma Price, had entered the home to find Phyllis busily engaged in cooking out meal.

New Policies Irk Interior, Check Shows

Grumbling Increases as Prices Rise, Incomes

Talk of Money Baffles
Average Man; NRA
Loses Support.

By George E. Sokolsky.
Mr. Sokolsky has been asked by The Washington Post to report the reaction of the people of the interior to the policies of the present Administration. This is the first of a number of occasional articles written from various centers.

Enroute, Portland, Oreg., Nov. 19. This swing across the country started in New York in the middle of October. It carried me as far South as Memphis—through the Middle West a bit—out to the Coast where I reached San Diego, near the Mexican border. Now, I am pushing northward to the Canadian border.

Everywhere men talk of the same thing, namely, what is being done to them in Washington. In Memphis they were quite cheered by the prospect of permanent 10-cent cotton, fixed by the Government, paid for by the Government, if necessary. But nowhere else did I find such cheerfulness. The wheat and hog and orange and lumber people of me not yet discovered how they can be as prosperous as the cotton farmer. They are told that it will come to them, too, but meanwhile the prices of manufactured goods have gone up, taxes have gone up, but the prices for their goods remain low. They listen; I learned lecturers the day weighed in the prices of agricultural commodities and the prices of manufactured goods, but they are not interested either in lectures nor in theoretical economics. They want to make some money and they don't see any way of making it.

They Have Simple Theory.
There is a very significant disparity between the ideas of the average American and the Government in Washington on the subject of money. To the average American, money does not involve a complicated theory. It is all very simple. He gets money for work or goods. He spends money on goods, rent, taxes, amusements, etc. The residue he puts in banks to invest for his future. To take care of a rainy day. Money means a dollar that will buy 100 cents worth of goods. The average housewife knows prices and she has a very fair idea what 20 nickels and 10 dimes should do in the household.

Now she is all mixed up because the Government in Washington is managing her dollar. She notices that her soap costs a few cents more; that meat is up a bit; that she is unable to chisel a few dollars each month to lay by for an extra hat. But she also sees that her husband's envelope does not get fatter; that her stenographer daughter is not getting an extra dollar a week.

Looks to Washington.
All that puzzles her. She asks: "Why do the Government managers to increase her cost of living, doesn't the Government increase her income?" The men do not as quickly note this disparity because the men don't buy in the chain stores and in the local department stores. Men, in this country, think in terms of money. But the women who handle the details of household management sense that Washington is not succeeding in some obtuse plan which they, the women, do not understand.

It is notable, wherever I have been, that the women are more cynical than the men. They are not so easily influenced by appeals to support the President or the Blue Eagle. They do not get excited by speeches over the radio. What they want is increased income and decreased expenditures. If they got an even break, they would be satisfied.

Woman Gets Permit to Let Baby Enter

San Pedro, Calif., Nov. 19 (AP)—Although her mother is an American citizen, 3-year-old Patricia Gordon, of Paris, is deemed a French citizen and it required a special dispensation of the United States Immigration Service for Patricia to disembark here today from the liner President Garfield.

Because Patricia's father, Rene Gordon, a Paris banker, is a citizen of France, so is his daughter, under United States statutes.

Patricia speaks English, French, German and Italian.

Hart Hat Found At Death Scene; Alibi Blocked

Woman Tells of Visit From Prisoner Day After Deed.

San Jose, Calif., Nov. 19 (AP)—Pressing the search for the body of Brooke Hart, victim of a kidnap plot to obtain $40,000, authorities today found his hat on the Alameda County side of San Francisco Bay.

The hat, identified by Deputy Sheriff John Moore, was found north of the San Mateo Bridge, from which the two men held, Thomas H. Thurmond and Jack Holmes, have allegedly confessed they threw young Hart after he had been stunned by blows.

Two investigators for the Alameda County District Attorney's office, George Henningsen and Joseph Brandon, found the hat.

Inside the hatband was the name of the San Jose department store operated by young Hart and his father, Alex J. Hart.

Continue to Drag Bay
Meanwhile police continued their operations of dragging the Bay with grappling hooks in an endeavor to recover the body weighed with concrete blocks before it was thrown from the bridge, an hour after Hart was kidnapped as he drove his roadster from a parking lot here November 8.

For nearly a week efforts were made to get the father to pay the $40,000. Last Wednesday night Thurmond was seized as he was talking over a telephone to the elder Hart and a few hours later Holmes was arrested in a hotel.

Sheriff Emig revealed he had questioned Mrs. H. S. Gum, attractive young San Jose matron, regarding her friendship with Thurmond. Emig said the accused man admitted "unrequited love" for Mrs. Gum made him "go off his nut" when she married another man a year ago.

Tried to Fix Alibi.
The sheriff said Mrs. Gum admitted she had seen Thurmond the day before and the day following young Hart's kidnapping, and that he had attempted to persuade her to furnish him an alibi.

Mrs. Gum refused to offer any aid, the sheriff declared. She did not know the nature of the emergency then, she said.

The hat, picked up from the mud flats today, was shown to the elder Hart. Tears rolled down his face as he looked at it, nodded his head and handed it back to officials. In a choked voice he said it was his son's.

Mrs. Anne Kahn, 29, Pneumonia Victim

New York, Nov. 19 (AP)—Mrs. Anne Whelan Kahn, 29, former wife of Gilbert Kahn, died of bronchial pneumonia today in a hospital where she had been a patient since she fell from a window of her Park avenue apartment September 10. Her hip was fractured in the three-story fall.

Mrs. Kahn was the daughter of C. A. Whelan, founder and former head of the United Cigar Stores Co. She was married to Gilbert Kahn, elder son of Otto H. Kahn, the banker, November 19, 1924.

Welles Keeps Post Until Cuban Strife Tension Eases

Watchful Policy Stands; Roosevelt Reveals
After Conference.

Decision Contrary To Envoy's Desire

Emissary on Way Here to Make Full Report Before Return.

By Leon Dure, Jr.
Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 19.—Ambassador Sumner Welles will return to Havana to remain at least until the present Cuban situation clears, it was made plain following a five-hour conference with the President here today.

Before returning, the Ambassador will go to Washington, arriving late tomorrow, to make a complete report to Acting Secretary of State Phillips. His return to Cuba, in the face of reports he would be replaced, was understood to mean that no change is contemplated in the present American policy.

Arriving during the morning in a plane from Atlanta, Ambassador Welles was met at Georgia Hall of the Warm Springs Foundation by President Roosevelt, his mother, who drove down in his small open car to take him to the Little White House atop Pine Mountain.

Dines With President.
The Ambassador had Sunday dinner with the President and his mother, Mrs. Sarah Delano Roosevelt, and then engaged him in conversation most of the afternoon. On his departure for Atlanta at nightfall, the President issued this statement:

"Ambassador Welles has conferred with the President. At the President's request he will proceed to Washington to spend a few days before returning to Havana. While in Washington he will confer with Acting Secretary Phillips and other officials of the State Department."

The return of Ambassador Welles, who championed the fallen De Céspedes government, was interpreted to mean the Administration would await developments in the island republic as the present Grau San Martín regime has not yet proved stable. Also, it was believed the Administration did not want to be put in the position of recalling an ambassador under the circumstances.

Whatever attitude Ambassador Welles might have of the matter

Boy Shot Dead; Chum, 16, Held

Prisoner Says Firing of Pistol Was Accident; Inquest Today.

A 14-year-old schoolboy was shot to death by a youthful companion in a weed-thatched field at Terra Ceita yesterday afternoon.
The victim, Raymond Smith, 630 Central avenue northeast, died at Emergency Hospital as physicians were about to resort to a blood transfusion. The charge from a .22 caliber pistol, held by James Walden, 14, 635 Girard street northeast, tore into the boy's right chest.

Walden, who said the gun was fired accidentally, was arrested by police of the Fifth precinct and held for a coroner's inquest today at 11:30 a. m.

Police said Smith, an eighth-grade student at Langley Junior High School, apparently had gone for a stroll with three friends—Walden, Paul Dimaggio, 9, 618 Girard street northeast, and George Clemmer, 13, 3401 Twelfth street northeast. The field where the boy was shot is about 100 yards from the Somerville brick plant.

The wounded boy was taken to the hospital by Policeman R. P. Hallion, who was cruising nearby. Policeman L. I. Botts arrested Walden and questioned the other two boys.

Surviving young Smith are his father, Walter A. Smith, a clerk in the Interstate Commerce Commission; his mother, a brother, Austin, 16, and a sister, Eleanor, 13. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Three Powers Fail to Agree In Arms Snarl

Parley Continuation Still in Doubt; Simon's Formula Debated.

Geneva, Nov. 19 (AP).—Delegates from the United States, France and Italy, in a three-hour tea party today at the hotel suite of Arthur Henderson, British president of the arms conference, failed to arrive at any decision regarding continuation of the parley.

Debate centered around acceptance of the proposals outlined by Sir John Simon, British foreign minister, on October 14, the eve of Germany's withdrawal from the conference—or of the acceptance of some more conciliatory program.

Of the delegates, only the French statesman, Joseph Paul-Boncour, is said to have insisted upon clinging to Simon's formula.

A decision upon what program will be presented to the coming convention will be made, it was understood, at another meeting scheduled to be held in the villa of Joseph Avenol, secretary-general of the league, tomorrow.

Delegates were sworn to secrecy.

It was understood, however, that Ambassador Hugh Wilson, sitting as an observer for the United States, reiterated the American position that some proposals for disarmament must come from the conference, but that in its present phases the conference is discussing only problems applicable to Europe.

Leesburg Boy Dies Of Hunt Injuries

Was Crushed When Horse Dropped Dead.

Leesburg, Va., Nov. 19 (AP).—Lee Gill, 19, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther W. Gill, of Leesburg, died this morning at the Loudoun County Hospital as a result of injuries received Saturday while in the hunting field at Belmont, home of former Secretary of War, Patrick J. Hurley.

Gill, who lived with his parents on the Leesburg estate, was riding Pat, aged thoroughbred, belonging to L. Clarke Hoge, when the horse dropped dead. Gill, who was thrown partly under the horse, received a fractured skull and internal injuries. Mrs. Hurley, riding close behind, returned to Belmont mansion.

Gill is survived by his parents and two sisters. Funeral services will be held from the Leesburg Methodist Church Tuesday.

5-Hour Plane Hop Sets New York-Miami Mark

Miami, Fla., Nov. 19 (AP).—Pilot James H. Doolittle, of Patterson, La., claimed an airplane speed record of 5 hours 1 minute 39.2 seconds between New York and Miami when he landed his low wing monoplane here late today.

Wedell left Floyd Bennett Field in New York at 12:35 p. m. and flashed by the finish line here to crack the previous record of 6 hours and 10 minutes held by Lou Reichers.

Welles Will Await Clear Cuban Trend

was not disclosed here, but it has been reported at Washington that he strongly wishes his replacement. The Grau San Martin government also is believed to favor another American representative, one who had not been identified with its opposition. Therefore, President Roosevelt's insistence that he return to Havana was thought to mean no early change in policy of watchful waiting.

Successor Chosen.

Ambassador Welles, handpicked for Cuba when revolution first stirred the Cuban people, was in the formation of the De Cespedes government, which was recognized immediately. At the time it was understood that, after the new government was installed, he would become Assistant Secretary of State, and the Cuban ambassadorship would go to Havana. Welles, however, was thought to mean no early change in policy of watchful waiting.

So far, irrespective of the attitude Ambassador Welles might have toward a movement headed by an army sergeant—such as Batista—the Grau government has not really fulfilled ordinary requirements of recognition. On the other hand, recognition would help it to obtain the usual requisites, such as maintaining order, show that active opposition has ceased, and display intent and ability to meet governmental obligations.

Another perfect day greeted the President as he settled down for his Thanksgiving vacation. With the Welles visit over, nothing of pressing importance will occupy him for several days at least, it is thought, and he will be free to fulfill his wish to drive about and inspect changes to the foundation in his nine-month absence.

He made several such trips during the day, driving by Georgia Hall to wave at friends in the morning, and piloting Ambassador Welles and Mrs. Roosevelt on a motor ride in the afternoon. He was obviously enjoying his visit.

Chief of the innovations he will inspect is the Georgia Hall, for which $100,000 was donated by Georgia citizens in tribute to him. It is of white colonial design, and will house the administration offices of this little resort as reception and dining hall.

While Warm Springs takes the President as a matter of course, 8,000 persons drove to see the Little White House in his absence, despite the inaccessibility of the resort, it was learned. Georgia papers gave whole pages to his return.

Borah First

300 Wires on Recognition Sent to President.

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 19 (AP).—President Roosevelt's vacation was further cheered today when he had a chance to read 300 telegrams of reaction to his recognition of Batista.

As chance would have it, the first opened by Stephen T. Early, his assistant secretary, was from Senator Borah. Beyond stating it endorsed the President's action, he would not make it public.

Only one message in the thick opposition, it was said, and that was from an anti-Russian society.

Batista Acts In Revolt Fear

Cuban Commander Ousts 730 Police Suspected of Disloyalty.

Havana, Nov. 19 (AP).—Col. Fulgencio Batista, head of the Cuban army, continued with extensive precautions today in the face of growing reports of a new Cuban revolution.

"The real leaders of the November 8 revolution are neither in prison nor are they dead," Batista said.

He continued a house-cleaning campaign in the police force, discharging a total of 730 men, including many lieutenants, captains and sergeants.

Soldiers arrested Gen. Ernesto Aguer, former governor of Havana Province, but declined to make public charges against him.

The real interest among Cubans today, however, was the outcome of the conference in the United States between American Ambassador Sumner Welles and President Roosevelt. All day long newspapers and foreign correspondents with requests for information.

Flier Killed as Gas Supply Runs Short

Plane Crashes After Brief Hop in Ann Arbor.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 19 (AP).—Tom Howard Brundage, 28, of Los Angeles, was killed late today when an airplane he was piloting crashed in a field 2 miles from the Ann Arbor Municipal Airport.

Brundage was the only one in the plane. He had been living with George Downs, manager of the airport.

Officials at the airport said Brundage thought he had gasoline enough for a 30-minute flight but apparently ran out of fuel soon after taking off.

3 Sailors, Broke, Held Up; 1 Shot

British Tar Near Death as Police Hunt Negro.

Houston, Tex., Nov. 19 (AP).—John W. Chivas, 20, Vancouver, B. C. sailor, was near death in a hospital here tonight as officers searched for a negro robber who shot him. Physicians reported his condition grave.

Chivas and two other apprentices on the British freighter King City were walking toward town from a docks when a Negro gunman halted them. The trio told the Negro they had no money. He then shot Chivas.

9 Papers Start Secret Pine Newprint Today

Atlanta, Nov. 19 (AP).—Nine Georgia newspapers tomorrow will appear on newsprint secretly made from southern pine trees, as a demonstration of closing the last link in American chemical independence.

This link, as scientists see it, is the manufacture from home resources of newsprint and all high-grade white paper. Newsprint now is an annual business of about $140,000,000, and two-thirds of it is imported.

3 Creditors Figured to Lose As 1 Debtor Wins in Inflation

Savings Bank Depositors, Life Insurance Owners Held Threatened by Cheap Dollar to Aid Few Million Farmers.

By Nicholas Roosevelt, former minister to Hungary, outstanding economist, writer and cousin of former President Theodore Roosevelt.

[This is the ninth of 10 articles written by Mr. Roosevelt, after a month's tour through the Middle Western agricultural States.]

"In many cases the farmer who is heavily indebted is no more to blame for his plight than the man who lent him money," a professor of agricultural economics said to me recently. "The creditor was as unwise in his lending as was the farmer in his borrowing. Both were speculators, though neither would admit it today."

There is much truth in this contention. And the logical conclusion is that if there is to be a readjustment of debts it should be effected between the borrower and the lender. The man who made an unwise loan should expect to pay the consequence of his bad judgment.

But if the inflationists have their way, the wise and prudent creditor will pay for the mistakes of the reckless lender. In order to help out a small class of debtors, all creditors must be penalized.

This philosophy back of inflation rests on one of the oldest and most cherished of our American political myths—that there are about 20,000,000 debtors in this country, and a mere handful of creditors, of which the principal ones are Messrs. J. P. Morgan, John D. Rockefeller and Charles E. Mitchell.

Three Creditors to One Debtor. And what are the facts? That there are at least three creditors for every debtor in the country.

Whenever I have made this statement I have been met with incredulity until I have itemized the divisions. It goes without saying, of course, that many persons are at the same time both creditors and debtors.

Among the creditors must be included all persons who have savings bank deposits. The statistical abstract shows that in 1931 there were 51,000,000 savings and time deposit accounts in various types of banks. Allowing for duplication this means that between 30,000,000 and 40,000,000 individuals have bank savings accounts. In addition there are the owners of ordinary bank accounts. These have been estimated to number in the neighborhood of 30,000,000. The largest group of creditors is made up of the holders of life insurance policies, which number over 60,000,000. Besides these major groups of creditors are many hundreds of thousands of individuals who have made loans to other individuals, or have bought Liberty Bonds, or hold other bonds or mortgages. Even though the same persons appear in several of these categories it may be estimated that the total number of creditors in the country is in the neighborhood of 65,000,000.

3,000,000 Farmers in Debt.

How many debtors are there? To arrive at an accurate estimate is difficult, owing to the complexity of the creditor-debtor relationship, but it needs only a moment's thought to realize that the authors of "The Internal Debt of the United States" are right when they say that most of the big debtors are corporations, rather than individuals. They include the railroads, banks and insurance companies. The number of individual debtors is small. Not more than 3,000,000 farmers have mortgages on their farms and of these only a quarter are in distress. To these 3,000,000 farm debtors should be added 10,000,000 debtors on urban real estate (no accurate figure is available of the number of such debtors. The total urban mortgaged debt is placed at $27,000,000,000 compared to $3,500,000,000 of farm mortgages). Allowing another 7,000,000 individual debtors on a long term basis (which figure is probably too high) it brings the total number of debtors up to 20,000,000.

French Results Cited.

Whether the exact number of creditors and debtors be as I have estimated the important fact is that this country has an enormous creditor class and that these are the people who would suffer if we were to have inflation.

The reason for this is that the sums owed them, whether by banks,

Roosevelt Foes Gird for Fight In Congress

Balky Democrats May Aid Opposition in Session Opening Jan. 3.

(Associated Press.)

The Seventy-third Congress will convene in six weeks for its first regular session with both Democratic and Republican quarters reporting that President Roosevelt cannot expect the same bipartisan support he received on emergency legislation last spring.

Republicans are shaping their campaign to recapture the House and as many Senate seats as possible in the 1934 elections. Some Democrats are voicing privately dissatisfaction with the results of the recovery legislation, as well as with patronage matters.

With the primary election campaign opening early in the spring, a number of Democrats, who broke campaign promises on the economy and other bills to support the Administration, say they are going to strike out for themselves.

Long Session Expected.

The regular session convenes January 3 under the twentieth amendment abolishing the "lame duck" session. It became effective October 15.

Democratic leaders hope the session will be short. They concede that, with new liquor taxes and regulation of liquor sales, revision of the entire Federal revenue structure and amendatory legislation to the emergency program enacted last spring, it may continue until midsummer.

Besides the St. Lawrence waterway treaty with Canada, to be pressed by Mr. Roosevelt, the Senate must act on hundreds of recess appointments to important Federal positions, including the designation of William C. Bullitt as Ambassador to Russia.

Plan Liquor Taxes.

Because of pressing domestic and international problems, Mr. Roosevelt has had little opportunity to formulate a legislative program for the January session.

But with the voting of prohibition repeal, the Administration has placed imposition of reasonable levies on alcoholic beverages at the top of the legislative calendar. The aim is to bring in as much revenue as possible and at the same time to drive out the bootlegger.

An Administration official today said that the President also was considering Government monopoly of the liquor trade to prevent high prices and protect dry States.

Administration Control Claimed.

Some Democratic leaders assert that despite any prospective desertion by either House or Senate members on important Administration proposals they will have sufficient strength to put through their legislation.

At present the Democrats have 308 members in the House to 118 Republicans and 5 Farmer-Laborites. There are six vacancies. In the Senate the Democrats have 60 seats to 34 Republican and 1 Farmer-Laborite, with 1 vacancy.

In addition, Administration leaders maintain the President continues to hold the support of the country, and that in the event of a showdown he could pit himself against an insurgent Congress.

French in Dilemma On Tariff Duties

Fear Losing U. S. Wine Trade if Rates Are Boosted

Paris, Nov. 19 (AP).—France was faced today with an economic dilemma, the only solution of which appeared to be drastic revision of her protective policy on foodstuffs.

The situation was made graver by England's insistence that France impose a surtax on American imports, to equalize the additional impost on British goods. And France was reluctant to take the step for fear of alienating the prospective American wine trade.

France's protective policy on meats, cheese, fruits, vegetables and even flowers, has boosted retail prices throughout the republic, and the cost of living has increased alarmingly.

Bankers to Air Funds In Louisiana Primary

New Orleans, Nov. 19 (AP).—The Senate committee investigating alleged fraud and corruption in the Broussard-Overtown senatorial primary of 1932 in Louisiana planned to hear testimony from New Orleans bank officials tomorrow.

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, chairman, announced the testimony would deal with accounts of individuals interested in the campaign of Senator John H. Overton.

Ohio Plans 50,000 Jobs Today in Huge Program

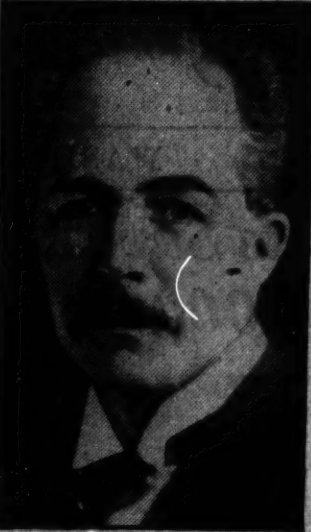

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 19 (AP).—Ordering 50,000 men to report for work tomorrow morning, Ohio today was the greatest single job-giving problem in its history.

The Ohio program of cooperation with the Federal Civil Works Administration was outlined by Adj. Gen. Frank D. Henderson, head of the State's Civil Works Administration, who estimated 70,000 Ohioans would be included in the project by Tuesday.

Wind Fans Forest Fire.

Sylvia, N. C., Nov. 19 (AP).—Rising wind tonight increased a fire menace in Jackson County as flames ate through timberlands with renewed vigor. Forestry officials said lives of fire-fighters were endangered because of strong winds.

Attorney Dies

ALBERT DANIEL SPANGLER, of the law division of the Veterans' Administration, who will be buried today.

A. D. Spangler Funeral Rites Set for Today

Burial in Glenwood to Be in Charge of His Masonic Lodge.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. today for Albert Daniel Spangler, 69, of the law division of the Veterans' Administration, at the home, 5424 Nebraska avenue northwest. Burial will follow with Masonic honors at Glenwood Cemetery.

Spangler died suddenly Thursday at his home. A native of Mount Royal, Pa., he came to Washington in 1887 as a clerk in the Pension Office. Later he became a member of the board of review, following which he went to the Veterans' Administration. He married Miss Minna Emmert in 1896.

A graduate of the George Washington Law School, he was prominent in church work and fraternal circles. He was secretary and a deacon in the Lutheran Memorial Church, at Thomas Circle, and taught a Bible class. He was registrar for 10 years of the Sons of the American Revolution and later president.

Other fraternities to which he belonged are the Harmony Lodge No. 17, Masons; the Columbia Commandery, Knights Templar, and Columbia Lodge of Odd Fellows. Surviving are the widow, a brother, Emerson Spangler, of Mount Royal, Pa., and a sister, Mrs. E. B. Miller, of Springfield, Ohio.

Mrs. Carl Rasmussen and George M. Deffenbacher will conduct the funeral services.

Washington, he called the fire department from Winchester, 45 miles away.

Firemen, however, could do little. All of the wells on the estate were too near the house to be of use, and an attempt to pump water from a stream was unsuccessful.

The Doeller house was one of the historic landmarks of the district. John Marshall built it for his eldest son. Doeller bought it several years ago and made extensive alterations.

Courts Made Headlines

The Doellers received front page attention when Mrs. Doeller, then Miss Catherine Louise Littauer, was living with her parents in France. In 1919 she met Doeller and they fell in love. Her parents took her to France and Doeller followed. They applied for a marriage license. Col. William L. Littauer asked a French court to prevent his daughter's marriage. The court refused. However, the marriage was postponed six months and finally took place in America in 1923. On his return trip from Europe, Doeller played the piano to quiet passengers during a storm.

Doeller was a New York automobile salesman and later an Army officer stationed here. After his marriage he became connected with a local brokerage firm. Mrs. Doeller conducted a dress shop.

Mrs. Doeller's father was formerly head of the Johnston, Glenview & Kingsboro Railroad, and is a brother of former Representative Lucian N. Littauer.

NOBODY WANTS YOU AROUND

When You are COUGHING and SNIFFLING YOU CAN'T BLAME THEM, EITHER

You are not very pleasant company when you have to take "time out" for a cough and a snuffle every few minutes.

Did you ever go to the theater or a bridge game and find yourself sitting next to a member of the "Coughing and Sniffing Brigade"? Rather annoying, wasn't it... and what's more, quite an unnecessary menace to public health.

The next time you are annoyed, whisper this sound advice into the offender's ear: "Go to the nearest drug store and get a bottle of Hall's Expectorant."

This time-tried remedy has successfully and safely relieved coughs due to colds for more than a quarter of a century. Hall's Expectorant gently soothes the irritated membranes of the bronchial tract and quickly quiets dangerous coughs.

Large Crowd Warmly Receives Opening Opera

4,500 Attend Popular Price Dual Offering

Audience Shows Delight, Wildly Applauding All Artists.

Forty-five hundred men, women and children filed into Washington Auditorium last night for grand opera.

In limousines, in taxicabs and on foot they came, some curious, some bored and uncomfortable, some unmistakably excited by their first opera. Some came in stiff shirts and low-backed gowns and sat in boxes. Many more came in their "Sunday best" and sat in the orchestra and balconies.

They came early and crowded the foyer to talk or quickly took their seats to sit restive until the house was darkened and the curtain went up for the twin performance of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci," the Capital's first offering of grand opera at popular prices.

Emilia Vergeri Acclaimed.

And less than 20 minutes after the overture most of them were on their feet clapping wildly, shouting "bravo!" to acclaim Emilia Vergeri, that veteran of European and American opera, in the middle of an aria of "Cavalleria Rusticana."

Vergeri stopped the show. And among that acclaiming crowd was a happy boy of 20. He was Vergeri's son Luis, hearing his mother in a grand opera role for the first time, that mother who has sung at the king's command in her native Spain.

Vergeri was not acclaimed alone. She was the first Giuseppe Martino Rossi, Maria Olla, Ciro, De Rita, native Washington barytone, received their generous share of applause.

Balconies Pleased.

To the stiff shirts and the low-backed gowns, Vergeri, Rossi, and the others were no longer events. But in the orchestra and balconies there was ample evidence that the evening will not soon be forgotten. For to many of these a top price of $4 cents made their first grand opera possible.

Arrangements were completed by The Post last night for sale of an additional block of 1,000 half-price seats during the opera week at the Stieff piano store, 1340 G street northwest.

U. S. Chamber Studying NRA

Silas Strawn's Committee Meets Here Friday to Discuss Codes.

Chicago, Nov. 19 (P).—Silas Strawn, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, tonight said the chamber directors had named a committee, of which he is a member, to study the results achieved by the NRA and the question of self-government in business.

A question which the committee will consider, Strawn said, will be whether it is feasible for business and industry, acting through their own trade organizations, to formulate codes and enforce self-government in industry without Federal aid.

Strawn said he could not give his approbation to the NRA to attempt compulsory enforcement of codes.

Pennypacker Dies; Harvard Veteran

Widely Known Educator Dies in Cambridge.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 19 (P). Henry Pennypacker, widely known in educational circles and to Harvard men as chairman of the committee on admission, died at Stillman Infirmary tonight. He was 66.

Mr. Pennypacker was born in West Chester, Pa., and was graduated from Phillips Exeter Academy and Harvard. He married the former Anna Carpenter, of Philadelphia, but became a widower in 1925.

Former Italian Envoy To League Council Dies

Rome, Nov. 19 (P).—Senator Vittorio Sciola, 79, one-time foreign minister and Italian representative on the League of Nations council, died today of arterio sclerosis.

Senator Sciola was an expert on Roman law. When the Fascists came into power, the senator was one of the few statesmen Premier Mussolini did not discard.

Lady Amy Harrington Rites Held in Detroit

Detroit, Nov. 19 (P).—Funeral services were held in Suburban Grosse Pointe Park today for Lady Amy Harrington, daughter of the late United States Senator James McMillan of Michigan.

Lady Amy, the widow of the late Sir John Harrington, of England, died at the home of her nephew, James T. McMillan, in Grosse Pointe Park, Friday night.

Boy Flees "Escapeless" Jail During Prayers

Flint, Mich., Nov. 19 (P).—While Sheriff Thomas Wolcott and his prisoners bowed their heads in prayer in the new "escape proof" county jail today, Graydon Mawdsley, 18, walked out.

The sheriff's son, Charles, 13, had missed the prayer meeting and saw Mawdsley walking down the street. The boy disturbed the prayer service to inform his father. Mawdsley was still at large tonight.

Scenes in the Washington Auditorium last night as a Washington audience waited to see its first popular priced grand opera. Above—Gabriele Simeoni lights a cigarette for Maria Olla, soprano, as she dresses for her part in "Pagliacci." Below—Luis Vergeri holds a mirror while his mother, Emilia Vergeri, fixes her makeup for "Cavalleria Rusticana." Luis heard his famous mother for the first time last night.

Emilia Vergeri as Santuzza gave a dramatically convincing and vocally satisfactory characterization. Her voice is one of distinctly emotional quality, with a controlled depth of tone in the lower register. She employs it with the control of an experienced singer, and it served her well in an exacting role.

The Turridio of Edward Ransome was sturdily sung, although he was evidently not at his best. There were times when his timbre was cloudy, and his resonance veiled. His most effective scene was, oddly enough, not the parting with Mama Lucia, which is usually the tenor's peak of lyricism in this opera, but the scene in which he sang the robust tones.

Giuseppe Martino Rossi gave distinction to the small role of Alfio, so frequently delegated to a minor barytone. His impersonation of the bluff muleteer was an excellent piece of acting, and he met the vocal requirements with a rich, colored voice. Elizabeth Gerard was a pert and vocally pleasing Lola, and Carlotta Bruno dealt adequately with the ungrateful part of Mama Lucia.

Clown Is Realistic.

In the prologue to "Pagliacci," Ciro de Rita disclosed a power and resonance of tone that brought an instant response from the audience. It was a question for a moment whether or not the continued applause would be rewarded with a repetition, but as the performance had been late in starting, the inexorable conductor refused.

His reading of Tonio's role did not again reach that plane of vocalism, although he sang through with a rich timbre. His acting was good, and his mishap clown was realistic and was never overdone.

Fortunato de Angelis was a pleasing Canio with a ringing and vibrant quality of tone, and his singing of "Fatti la giubba" brought a shout of approval. Maria Olla as Nedda filled that lyric role with a charming and light voice that was particularly plastic in the Ballata.

Lovers of Art Plan Academy

Group Meets in Richmond to Unify Activities in Virginia.

Richmond, Nov. 19 (P).—The largest group of art lovers ever assembled in Virginia gathered here yesterday at the Richmond Academy of Art's galleries and agreed to unify and coordinate the various regional art activities in the State.

Organization of the Virginia Academy of Arts to carry out this purpose was set as a goal.

Webster S. Rhoads, acting president of the Richmond Academy, described the State work of the academy and the necessity for State-wide organization. Thomas C. Parker, academy director, presented the plan for the academy.

Organizations represented were the Valentine Museum here, the Danville Art Club, the Norfolk Art Club, the Lynchburg Art Club, the University of Virginia Art Department, the Norfolk Museum, Richmond Public Schools Art Department, and others.

Greenville, S. C., Nov. 19 (P).—Clayton Williams, 35, and Otis Owens, 33, shot each other to death today in a gun fight at the home of Lem Jones, near Pelzer. William Jones, 14, son of Lem Jones, was hit in the right leg by a bullet that had traveled through Williams' chest.

Vergeri's Rich Contralto Wins Her Audience

Appreciative Throng Sees "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci."

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Presenting the time-honored double bill of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci," the International Opera Company opened a week's engagement in the Washington Auditorium last evening before an audience that augured well both in size and responsiveness.

It was the first occasion on which grand opera has been offered here on the basis of popular prices alone, and the undertaking is being watched with no small interest.

Considering the difficulties under which the organization labors in such matters as scenery and mechanical equipment, last evening's performance was very creditable. The orchestra was not always as effective as one would have desired, and there were some ragged moments during the first part of "Cavalleria" when chorus and instruments varied in synchrony.

But under the energetic direction of Gabriele Simeoni that discrepancy was soon overcome.

Prologue Applauded.

London Correspondent Disappears From Ship

London, Nov. 19 (P).—Authorities were mystified today at the presumed death of Maj. Lukin Johnston, chief correspondent at London for the Southern newspapers of Canada, who disappeared from a ship Saturday night en route from Germany to London.

Maj. Johnston was aboard the London & Northeastern Railway's ship, Prague, and had interviewed Chancellor Hitler only a few days before his voyage.

Toast Drunk To Roosevelt At Soviet Fete

Writers Guests of Foreign Office; U. S. to Hear Kalinin Today.

Moscow, Nov. 19 (P).—President Roosevelt was toasted tonight for the first time in Soviet Russia at a dinner tendered American correspondents resident in Moscow by the press section of the foreign office.

At the conclusion of a brief speech in which he hailed recognition as a "victory for common sense in international relations," Alexis Neimann, acting head of the foreign office press department, raised a glass filled with champagne and said:

"To the health of the American President, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

There was silence as 25 men, including 9 American correspondents, foreign office officials and leading Soviet writers raised their glasses to their lips.

Deeper Friendship Seen.

Paying tribute to Roosevelt for initiating the action that brought about recognition, Neimann said, "two Russian writers have always been inspired by friendship for each other and our hope is that this friendship will mature and increase."

He revealed that M. I. Kalinin, president of the Soviet central executive committee, would speak to the American public over the air tomorrow at 11 a. m. New York time, which will be the first official statement from Moscow since recognition was established Friday.

Karl Radek, foremost publicist of Soviet Russia, praised newly appointed Ambassador William C. Bullitt in the newspaper Pravda today and included other Americans who favored the recognition of Russia.

Digs at Others in U. S.

In an article called "America Discovers the U. S. R." Radek at the same time took slap at the "Hardings, Coolidges, Hoovers, Colbys and Hughes" who, he said, "thought to dictate their own laws to the world, persuaded that our new country would expire because of an expedition not to exist save on a basis of capitalism."

The Pravda, official Communist party organ, was the only newspaper out today and represented the only published reaction to United States recognition that has reached the Russian capital.

Radek in his article wrote that the principles of capitalism "have been shaken by developments in the United States. They no longer have the right to assume such an ironical attitude toward the question whether our way is the right one."

Trojanovsky New U. S. Ambassador

Last night, on this train, the usual conversation developed among the men as to whether the NRA and the A. A. A. management of money made any sense. Most of the conversation was antagonistic to Washington. Its most contented defendant was only kept on repeating that it was all an experiment and that if it did not work it would all be changed. But business men insisted they were being reorganized in such a manner that they would not be able to handle their own business after a while. One man suggested that the Government wanted to run his business, why didn't they buy it from him.

The trouble seems to be that in this country, in spite of a few notable trusts, the bulk of enterprise is still in the hands of small middle-class people, who are accustomed in good times to a comparatively medium return on their investment and labor. These small business men live in small towns, in their own mortgaged homes. Their children go to high school and college and have second or third hand automobiles.

NRA a Burden to Them.

Families like this survived the depression because they had something left and they earned a little; they even rescued some of their money when the banks shut down. Now the NRA is placing upon them added burdens for which there seems to be no compensation. They are told by Mr. Tugwell that their savings are sterile, but they know that their savings pulled them through the depression.

Now, they don't know what is happening to them. They simply can not understand what is happening. They read that the general picture for the entire country is improving, but it takes a professional mind to consider general pictures. What people understand is how they and their neighbors are getting along, and so far as they know they are not getting along very much better than in 1931. That puzzles them, for they read in the newspapers that the NRA and Mr. Roosevelt have fixed everything up so that there will never again be a depression.

The farmers make a loud noise and the industrial worker gets what he wants because both are organized. These middle-class folks are unorganized and would resent the idea of organizing against the Government. That would have the taste of rebellion to them. But they do vote; in most places they vote preponderantly, and they will not vote for a continuation of confusion.

Today they are still with Roosevelt but against the NRA, but they are moving away from him. And, curiously enough, they do not know where to move to. Even in that respect they are confused.

2 Men Die When Car And School Bus Collide

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 19 (P).—A bus, carrying 30 Trenton high school students, collided with a sedan today, injuring 2 men fatally and causing injuries to about 20 other persons.

Walter Hughes, 23, and Charles Jackson, 24, both of Trenton, died in St. Francis Hospital.

Nazis Open Fund Drive.

Berlin, Nov. 19 (P).—The German capital resounded today with the hammer stroke of 3,000 Hitler youths pounding on wooden shields to signify the opening of a drive to collect funds for winter relief. And, youths were hammering nails at the behest of the public for 1 cent or more each.

Soviet Envoy, Once an Exile, Fled Siberia

Trojanovsky Is Revered as "Old Bolshevik," Noted Diplomat.

Alexander Antonovitch Trojanovsky, Old Bolshevik and accomplished diplomat, was named yesterday as first Soviet Ambassador to Washington.

"Old Bolsheviks" are those revered members of the Russian Communist party who joined before the revolution. Especially select are those who suffered exile in Siberia. Alexander Antonovitch (as his intimates know him) was sent to Siberia in 1907. Like many another, he escaped abroad a year later.

Well educated, a graduate of the Tsarist Military Academy and Kiev University, he settled in Paris and engaged in literary work until the revolution in 1917 made it safe to return to his native land. He promptly joined the Red army, seeing active service until appointed to a post in the government archives in 1918.

He speaks fluent French and good English.

Slender of build, with a broad Slavic face and sharp black eyes, he at once betrays himself as a native of central Russia. He was born in Tula, leading metallurgical center.

Since the revolution, Trojanovsky has spent about half his time in directing trade matters and the remainder in the diplomatic service. He was ambassador to Japan for five years ended last January. Upon his return to Moscow he was made vice chairman of the Gosplan (the state planning board) under Valeri Maslansk, who also was mentioned as a possible candidate for the ambassadorship.

He will take up residence in the old Imperial Russian Embassy on Sixteenth street, officially turned over to the Soviet government in the person of Litvinov on Saturday. Extensive renovation is believed necessary, for the place has been boarded up for more than a decade.

Trojanovsky is 51 years old, married, with two children. He is expected here in December and his family soon after.

New Deal Leaves Inlanders in Fog

In spite of this cynical attitude, Mr. Roosevelt manages to come off fairly popular, although it is a decreasing popularity. On the trains between New York and Chicago a month ago it was impossible to say a word against him. In the South, I found that he was treason to suggest that he could be in error. In Chicago, however, I found that men wondered exactly what the Administration was doing. There seemed, in the middle region, to be a tendency to ridicule the Administration. In Utah, men were bitterly antagonistic. In California, a definite feeling of resentment was springing up and in a motion picture house two nights ago as many applauded as hissed Hoover in the news reel.

Train Talk Antagonistic.

Last night, on this train, the usual conversation developed among the men as to whether the NRA and the A. A. A. management of money made any sense. Most of the conversation was antagonistic to Washington. Its most contented defendant was only kept on repeating that it was all an experiment and that if it did not work it would all be changed. But business men insisted they were being reorganized in such a manner that they would not be able to handle their own business after a while. One man suggested that the Government wanted to run his business, why didn't they buy it from him.

The trouble seems to be that in this country, in spite of a few notable trusts, the bulk of enterprise is still in the hands of small middle-class people, who are accustomed in good times to a comparatively medium return on their investment and labor. These small business men live in small towns, in their own mortgaged homes. Their children go to high school and college and have second or third hand automobiles.

Families like this survived the depression because they had something left and they earned a little; they even rescued some of their money when the banks shut down. Now the NRA is placing upon them added burdens for which there seems to be no compensation. They are told by Mr. Tugwell that their savings are sterile, but they know that their savings pulled them through the depression.

Now, they don't know what is happening to them. They simply can not understand what is happening. They read that the general picture for the entire country is improving, but it takes a professional mind to consider general pictures. What people understand is how they and their neighbors are getting along, and so far as they know they are not getting along very much better than in 1931. That puzzles them, for they read in the newspapers that the NRA and Mr. Roosevelt have fixed everything up so that there will never again be a depression.

The farmers make a loud noise and the industrial worker gets what he wants because both are organized. These middle-class folks are unorganized and would resent the idea of organizing against the Government. That would have the taste of rebellion to them. But they do vote; in most places they vote preponderantly, and they will not vote for a continuation of confusion.

Today they are still with Roosevelt but against the NRA, but they are moving away from him. And, curiously enough, they do not know where to move to. Even in that respect they are confused.

Lynching Defi Rouses Ritchie

Suggests Replacement of Prosecutor Refusing Nine Arrests.

Baltimore, Nov. 19 (P).—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie today suggested that circuit judges replace State's Attorney John B. Robins, of Somerset County, unless he has arrested the nine men whom witnesses have sworn had a part in the lynching at Princess Anne, Md., last month.

"If Mr. Robins does persist (in refusing to have the men arrested) then the judges will, I feel sure, consider the appointment of some one in Mr. Robins' place to act as State's attorney in the prosecution and trial of these charges, and perform the duties which Mr. Robins will not perform," the Governor said.

Ritchie asked the judges to meet tomorrow to discuss procedure.

The evidence against the nine was collected by Attorney General William Preston Lane, Jr., largely from policemen, who were beaten back by the mob which stormed the Somerset Jail and lynched George Armwood, Negro, charged with attacking an aged white woman.

Lane forwarded the evidence to Robins and asked that the nine be arrested immediately and brought before a magistrate to decide whether or not they should be held for the grand jury. Robins refused to make the arrests, saying he believed a mob would take the men from the jail if the magistrate sent them there. He suggested instead that the evidence be submitted to the grand jury at its customary secret meeting.

"I SAVED $14.00 on CAR INSURANCE

in the largest mutual casualty company—noted for prompt settlements."

It was a stroke of good fortune when I learned that 115,000 business men had insured their cars with Liberty Mutual. I saw that Liberty Mutual was the largest car insurance company in America. I saw that Liberty Mutual was the largest car insurance company in America. I saw that Liberty Mutual was the largest car insurance company in America.

Liberty Mutual, you see, is owned by the policyholders. It was organized by a group of prominent insurance buyers—men who wanted the strongest possible protection at lower cost. The policyholders receive the profits of the business in the form of dividends—and these dividends have never been less than 20% a year—for twenty-one years. Typical savings are from $12.50 on small cars to $14.00 on large cars.

Just think how any business man would welcome a chance to save 20% of his operating expense. And automobile insurance is certainly a fixed operating expense because no one can afford to drive a car out of the garage without it.

And—mind you—I didn't sacrifice a single element of safety when I changed to Liberty Mutual. The company has earned substantial profits and added to its resources ever since the depression. It is much stronger today than it was in 1929. That's the kind of I need to know about my business.

No insurance company has a better reputation for service! 99% of all accident cases have been settled out of court because Liberty maintains its own full-time claim adjusting staff and never delegates the work to outsiders.

I wonder why every car-owner doesn't write to Liberty Mutual and find out just how much money he could have safely saved on his insurance. I did—and saved myself $14.00.

Tear out this coupon below as a reminder. It may save you as much as $14.00. Mail it today for your free copy of booklet—How Your Liberty Mutual Insurance Can Save You Money. Rev. Coughlin Holds Morgan 'Rule' Is Over Withdrawals of Woodin and Acheson Hailed by Priest.

Detroit, Nov. 19 (AP)—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, pastor of the Shrine of the Little Flower, said in a speech today that "the malevolent influence of the Morgans" passed with the retirement of William H. Woodin and Undersecretary Dean Acheson from the Treasury Department.

Asserting that the President's plans and promises to the Nation will be kept, Father Coughlin said: "Two weeks ago this afternoon I informed you that the money changers were already out of the temple. Today you know this to be a fact. Mr. Woodin and Mr. Acheson (Dean Acheson, former Undersecretary of the Treasury) are dismissed in no impolite but uncertain manner from the Treasury. With their departure passes the malevolent influence of the Morgans. With their departure there comes an end to one of the chief obstructions to our financial emancipation."

Father Coughlin's speech was broadcast by an independent hook-up of radio stations.

"And secondly," Father Coughlin continued, "with the appointment of Mr. Morgenthau (Henry Morgenthau, jr.) the price of our gold ounce will not lag behind the price placed upon gold by the British government.

"In other words it will be possible for us with safety and security to issue more currency dollars against this revaluated gold."

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker (Trade-mark Applied For)

BAKER.

INDIVIDUALS close to the White House and others intimate with congressional leaders are offering odds that all or a portion of the 15 per cent pay-out will be repealed before Congress convenes. Bigger odds are available that the entire amount early in the session in the event such action has not already been taken by President Roosevelt.

The forecasters base their wagers on these indications:

1. The highly organized form the anti-pay cut forces have developed in the last few weeks. This movement includes all the Government employe organizations. In addition, the American Federation of Labor is campaigning actively for the Federal workers. Other Federal employe friends include civic groups, churches, Veterans and hundreds of similar bodies throughout the country. The drive for betterment of the Government employe's status is not centered in Washington, but has become nationwide in scope in the last few weeks, labor leaders point out.

2. The trend of the survey on cost of living under compilation by Labor Department upon which President Roosevelt might order return of part or all of the pay.
3. More members of Congress have pledged support toward pay restoration, extension of the merit system and other items beneficial to the U. S. employe and to facilitate the transaction of the vast amount of routine and emergency legislation current.

Wedding bells will peal forth November 30 at Interstate Commerce Commission. Miss Irene Constant, Chief Clerk's Office, will be married to her childhood sweetheart, Edward Cox, at St. Matthews, Mass.

A surprise visit was paid to Haskell C. Davis, Bureau of Accounts, C. C. recently by the Five Points Club members. Mr. Davis is master of Roosevelt Lodge No. 44. During the evening Calvin I. Kephart gave Mr. Davis a fountain pen desk set as a token from the club. Mrs. Davis was presented with a big bouquet of roses.

Wright Urges Railway Shop Repair Loans

PWA Official Negotiates to Furnish Funds to Create Jobs.

Frank C. Wright, director of the transportation loan division of the Public Works Administration, has reported to Administrator Ickes that progress has been made in negotiations with railroad officials with a view to making further loans from public works funds to create additional employment and boost purchasing power.

The P. W. A. is prepared to lend money on security to railroads to be used for repairing locomotives and freight cars.

Wright said many men can be moved off relief rolls and placed on payrolls immediately, with full-time employment provided if railroads will borrow money from the P. W. A.

Shop Towns Hit

"Many railroad shop towns have been black spots on the unemployment map, for all roads have been forced to cut repair work on motive power and rolling stock to the bone for the last three years," he reported.

"Many shops have been closed down entirely for long periods, while others have operated on part time. This has been the cause for deep concern on the part of rail managers, who have given their shop men all the employment possible with funds at their command."

Names of railroads with which negotiations have been pending were not announced and will not be until definite allotments of money have been made, Wright said.

The transportation director said that by deferring needed repairs railroads have built up a large backlog of employment. The size of the backlog is indicated by the fact that on January 1, 1932, the Class I carriers had only 6,990 locomotives out of service, while by July 1 of this year the number had increased to 11,000. This is more than 22 per cent of all the locomotives owned by railroads of that class.

Draw on Reserves

To replace locomotives taken out of service to await repairs the roads have drawn on reserves of serviceable engines kept stored away for emergencies. On January 1, 1932, Class I roads had 10,982 serviceable engines in storage. On October 1, 1933, the number had been cut to 5,522, or nearly by half.

An accumulation of repair work on freight cars of all descriptions also has developed during the past few years. In January, 1932, there were 61,287 freight cars awaiting or undergoing repairs, and on August 1, 1933, this number had increased to 231,768.

Railroad shop activity has been increasing since midsummer, Wright reported, but the amount of money roads have been able to spend on current and deferred repairs has been limited. Little money has been borrowed for the purpose.

Monthly reports of the American Railway Association on the condition of locomotives and freight cars indicated that while current repair requirements are now being met, little has been done to reduce the amount of equipment stored for repair.

Plan for Increases

Wright reported to Ickes that it is essential, in his belief, that railroads have enough serviceable locomotives and freight cars to care for increased traffic. Loans of public works funds, he said, will enable carriers to get ready for increased business and at the same time to remove men from relief rolls.

"Money borrowed by carriers for repair work can be converted into immediate employment for repair jobs do not involve the drawing up of elaborate plans, specifications and contracts, advertising for bids and awarding contracts," Wright said.

Allotments totaling $135,000,000 already have been made to railroads by the P. W. A., including $85,000,000 for electrification of the Washington-New York line of the Pennsylvania. Actual transfer of the money is awaiting approval of a loan contract submitted to the railroads by the P. W. A.

Luther Pledged School's Amity

German Envoy Promised Courteous Hearing for Columbia U. Talk.

New York, Nov. 19 (P).—Dr. Hans Luther, German Ambassador to the United States, has the assurance of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, that he will be received "with all the courtesy due his rank" when he makes an address at the school December 12.

In a letter made public today, Dr. Butler refused to comply with the request of the Social Problems Club of Columbia University to cancel Dr. Luther's address.

The club threatened to hold an anti-Nazi demonstration November 15, the date on which the ambassador was originally scheduled to speak. Dr. Luther canceled the engagement because of illness.

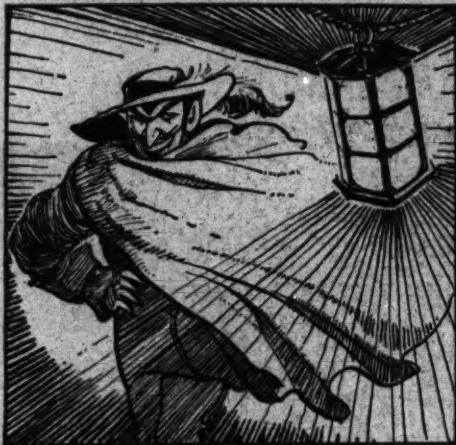

Miracles of Don Bosco Approved at Vatican

Vatican City, Nov. 19 (P).—A decree approving the miracle of Don Giovanni Bosco, the founder of the Salesian Order for the Care and Training of Children, was read today in the presence of Pope Pius XI and an assembly of high churchmen and diplomats.

This was one of the final steps toward Don Bosco's canonization.

Pieces of Eight

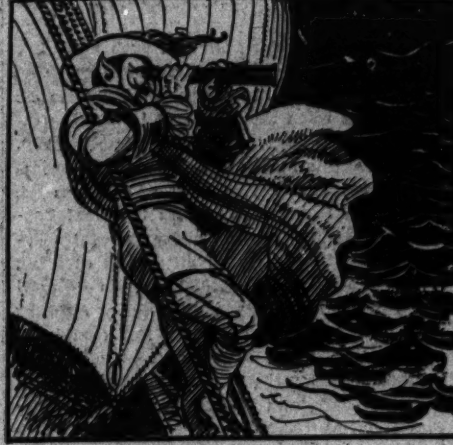

Pirates were just as superstitious as other sailors. They were badly frightened aboard the Queen Anne's Revenge by the appearance, in mid-ocean of a mysterious man in gentleman's dress who strolled about the ship at night only.

Mysterious Stranger Aboard

He spoke to no seaman but was always looking off to sea with a quizzical smile. Several times at midnight he was joined in the bow of the ship by Blackbeard, and the two were seen to be in confidential conversation.

One night, when the stars were shining, the mysterious stranger was seen far up in the rigging, and the men said he was making strange gestures with his arms. An hour the dark stranger stood thus, sometimes peering through a spy-glass into empty space.

When the mystery man descended, clouds overspread the sky, and a gale of wind came out of the northwest. "He is the Devil himself," said the hard-pressed sailors of Capt. Teach, "and he brought this storm upon us with his beckoning."

U. S. Recovery Acts Expected To Aid Filipinos

Price Slump in 1932, Report Reveals.

The downward trend in prices on Philippine export products on world markets continued throughout 1932, but ultimate gains on the islands through the National recovery act and the agricultural adjustment act are expected, according to the annual report of the War Department's Bureau of Insular Affairs.

The report, signed by Brig. Gen. F. Lej. Parker, barely mentioned the independence question, but unrest in the islands as a result of the depression was discussed.

"The governor general," Gen. Parker said, "commends in his report the spirit of cooperation shown by officials of the executive and legislative branches of the insular government in economy measures that enabled the government to close its year in sound financial condition."

Business of banks and trust companies showed marked improvement last year over 1931, according to a report of the secretary of finance for the islands, which also showed the island resources increased $4,775,000.

In 1932, departures of Filipinos from the United States exceeded departures from the islands for the first time, the report said. A total of 2,088 left the islands and 12,451 returned.

British Captain Downs Chinese Crew's Mutiny

Los Angeles, Nov. 19 (P).—Having broken by his heroism the mob spirit of 32 Chinese sailors, who threatened his life in a mutiny as the ship was about to leave for the Dutch East Indies, Capt. B. G. Protheroe, of the British oil tanker Clam, today went about the prosaic work of signing a new crew.

The mutiny, brewing in the fore-castle while the ship plowed toward Los Angeles from South America, burst last night in a wild melee on deck, but was quelled.

Amato, 'Met' Star, Sings Tonight Celebrating 25th Year in U. S.

Barytone of Noted Opera Group Gave Duets With Caruso.

New York, Nov. 19 (P).—Twenty-five years ago tomorrow night, a tall, handsome barytone from Italy, in his American debut at the Metropolitan, brought cheers from the "Golden Horseshoe."

He was Pasquale Amato, one of the operatic stars of all time.

The opera was "Traviata," Verdi's tragedy of the Lady of the Camellias. With Amato that night sang Caruso and Marcella Sembrich.

Tomorrow night, in the mammoth old Hippodrome on Sixth avenue, Amato sings "Traviata" again. It will be a gala anniversary. Competitors of old will be there. Caruso is dead. Sembrich is ill and 75, but Geraldine Farrar has reserved half the front row.

It was with Farrar that Amato sang in the world premiere at the

"Met" of Puccini's "Girl of the Golden West."

"Traviata" has been eventful in Amato's life. In its role of Gertrude, father of Alfredo, the lover of Violetta, he made his debut in student days in Naples. Then he went to La Scala, in Milan. Here it was that Verdi first presented "Traviata."

The famed barytone aria, "Di Provenza," brought quick fame to Amato in that Milan debut. He sang it three times.

When Giulio Gatti-Casazza and Arturo Toscanini came to the Metropolitan from La Scala in 1908, they brought Amato along. Caruso already was here. Their duets still remain the acme for comparison.

After 14 years, Amato left the Metropolitan, but he could not keep away from opera. He gave lessons, sang occasionally. When the Chicago Opera Company came here, he was persuaded to sing again.

If his voice isn't what it once was, the artistry is still there, and the grandeur.

Building Code Opponents Air Views Today

Hearings Open at 10 A. M.; Gen. Johnson May Be Present.

The disputed construction code will be the subject of a public hearing today when its opponents will be given an opportunity to express themselves.

The code, virtually completed, is opposed by labor interests, which are insisting upon separate codes for the building and other construction industries and upon definitely fixed prices for skilled labor.

Representatives of the American Federation of Labor, who have actively opposed the code, are expected to give their views when the hearing opens before Division Administrator Malcolm Muir in the auditorium of the Commerce Building at 10 a. m.

Heading the fight for the code will be representatives of the Construction League, which has in its membership organizations representing all kinds of construction. Also favoring the code will be the United States Chamber of Commerce, which has been opposing the contentions of the labor organizations.

A publicity barrage has been under way for days.

Gen. Johnson, NRA administrator, has expressed the hope that he can attend the hearing.

Yesterday, Johnson was seeking to work out an agreement on disputed sections of the printing and graphic arts codes, which are involved in a similar labor-employer controversy. Leaders of the industry met with him in his office almost all day Sunday.

When the building industry and the printing industry are added to the NRA roster, most of the Nation-wide trades will be in the fold. NRA last week added a labor code for almost 500,000 food and grocery stores as well as a code for hotels. The grocery code was hurried through as a regulator of wages because of delay in the Farm Administration in adopting a code of fair practices for this industry. The code for food retailers established a flat 48-hour working week.

All PWA Jobs To Be Watched By Inspectors

U. S. Organization Set Up "To Prevent Graft and Waste."

As a safeguard against "graft, waste and slipshod work" in projects for which loans and grants were made by the Public Works Administration, an inspection division has been organized within the organization to check upon all non-Federal projects and see where every dollar is spent.

Administrator of Public Works Ickes said the organization's function will be to see to it that the Government and citizens of cities, towns and counties get full value for every dollar that is borrowed and which they will have to repay.

The inspection division also will be charged with seeing to it that the NRA codes of fair competition are observed on all P. W. A. work, that P. W. A. regulations are obeyed, that there is no skimping on materials and that the maximum amount of unemployment relief is afforded by this money.

William M. Steele, of New York, a civil engineer, has been appointed to head the new division. He will be assisted by a staff of State engineer inspectors who will work in cooperation with State engineers and State advisory boards, using the offices of the latter.

Working under the direction of the State engineer inspectors will be resident engineer inspectors, assigned to supervise and check up on one or more projects, according to the division's program. On large jobs, resident inspectors and one or more assistant resident engineer inspectors will be employed, if necessary.

In the case of slum clearance and low-cost housing projects, Ickes said, a supervising engineer will be on each job throughout. Every slum clearance and low-cost housing allotment made has been with the understanding that a supervising engineer will be on the job.

Troops Asked For Scottsboro Case Retrial

Refusal of Venue Change to Start Negro on Third Fight for Life.

Decatur, Ala., Nov. 19 (P).—A new chapter in the now nearly three-year-old Scottsboro case will be opened tomorrow, when attorneys for the nine Negro defendants, accused of attacking two white girls, advance a motion for a change of venue. The motion will be offered as Heywood Patterson, one of the nine, is arraigned for his third trial.

Attorney General Thomas E. Knight, Jr., said he would oppose the defense's plea for change of venue to avoid delay.

Final decision will rest in the hands of Judge W. W. Callahan, of Decatur, who will preside, since Judge James E. Horton, of Athens, the other judge of the court, has recused himself.

Judge Horton reversed a Morgan County jury that convicted Patterson here last April and fixed his punishment at death, on the grounds the State had not established sufficient proof to warrant the verdict.

If Judge Callahan overrules the motion for a change of venue, a venire of 100 will be drawn for the jury, and Patterson will face trial for his life a third time November 27.

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 19 (P). Samuel S. Leibowitz, chief of defense counsel in the Scottsboro case, tonight made public a telegram he had sent to President Roosevelt, asking him to request Gov. B. M. Miller to order troops to Decatur for the arraignment tomorrow of the nine accused Negroes and for the trials beginning November 27.

Workers Attack U. S. Budget Cut

an editorial in the organization's organ, The Federal News.

"The plight and plight is the proper word to be used in this connection—in which virtually all the scientific agencies of the Government find themselves as a result of the parsings and cuttings has become apparent to even those persons who know little about the normal activities of those agencies."

Congressional approval of Budget Director Lewis W. Douglas' recommendations will mean a continuation of existing inequities, President Babcock, of the American Federation of Government Employees, said.

He pointed to the Civil Service Commission, where every employee is required to work five hours overtime a week. He cited instances where typists performing the same work in different departments receive widely different pay, because appropriations have been pared in one instance and left untouched in another.

"Pulling Purse Strings."

"There should be no objection if the Budget Bureau were conscientiously eliminating unnecessary employees and unnecessary services," he said.

"But apparently that isn't what is being done. They are simply pulling the purse strings." The A. F. G. E. head estimated it would require only $10,000,000 additional to restore the 15 per cent pay cut. He based this estimate on replies to a questionnaire sent heads of Government departments. They indicated more than half the amount needed for restoring the cut could be financed with departmental funds already impounded.

One department head declined to fill out the questionnaire unless he were advised to do so by the President. Babcock wrote the President. Yesterday he received a reply. It advised him the requested information would be carried in the forthcoming budget message.

The drive to restore the 15 per cent cut will gain impetus this week at a meeting of the Joint Conference of Government Workers, comprised of more than a dozen national organizations representing about 250,000 members. This group, sponsored by the American Federation of Government Employees, already has besieged members of Congress for support.

Another Group in Fight.

Another formidable group organized with the pay fight as its principal objective is the National Legislative Council of Federal Employees Organized by the National Federation of Federal Employees and allied associations, with a membership in excess of 150,000. These organizations, through branches scattered throughout the country, have treated with senators and representatives on home soil during the recess. Babcock has obtained more than 100 pledges to vote for full restoration from lawmakers of both parties.

Meanwhile, speculation continued over the possibility that President Roosevelt might order return of part or all of the pay cut January 1 on the basis of a cost of living index under compilation by the Labor Department. He was granted such authority by the economy act.

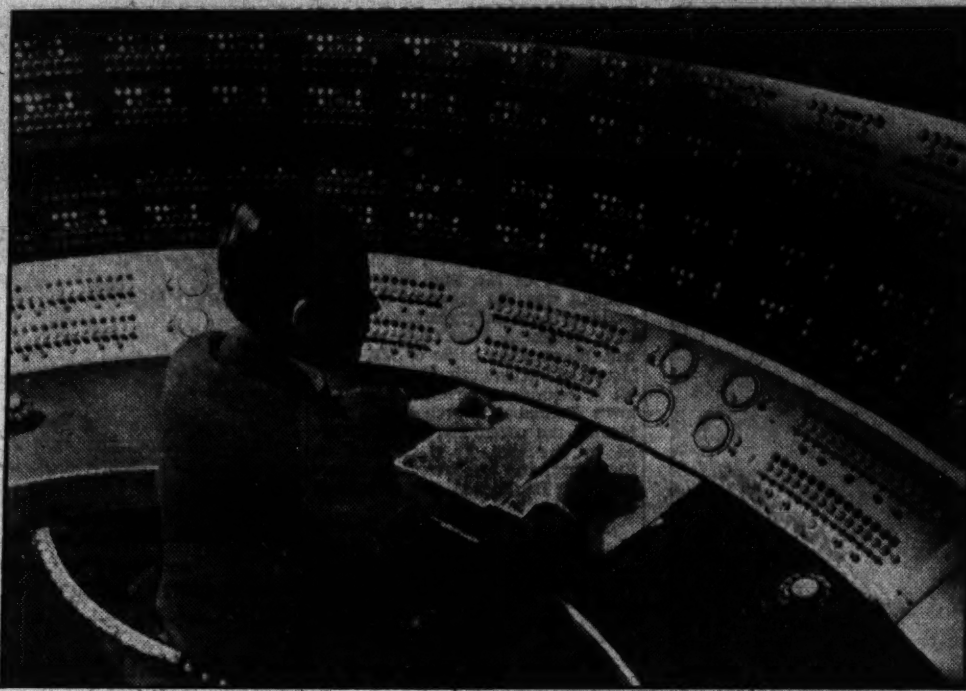

Should the salary reduction be restored by executive order, employees' groups will continue their legislative program in an effort to have the restoration made permanent. Without such congressional action the President would retain authority to change the pay scale at the end of each six-month period if the cost of living should decrease.

Jews Ask $2,000,000 For German Refugees

New York, Nov. 19 (P).—Jewish leaders attending a National emergency conference voted today to seek a $2,000,000 fund during the coming year for the settlement of German Jewish refugees in Palestine.

Louis Lipsky, chairman of the American Palestine campaign, said it would require $10,000,000 in 1934 to aid refugees from Germany.

Radio Waves and Ripples

Here is the nerve center of N. B. C. at Radio City, where one operator controls 35 stations on the coast-to-coast networks.

COME wind and high water, come lady announcers and people who learn French, come what may, our days can not be forever dark as long as radio show title writers come up every now and then with something like: "Every One Likes a Sponge Cake"—WJSV, 11:15 a. m. today. We think almost every one likes Johnnie cake, too.

Whitecaps.

WRC—Manhattan Monday Review, Marie Fowler singing "I Wanna Know All About You," Bert Bagranoff in "Mine," 8 p. m.; A. & P. Gypsies, "It's Only a Paper Moon," Frank Parker singing "I'm Falling in Love With Some One," 9 p. m.; K-7 Secret Service Spy Drama, "The Mine Trap," based on an incident on the Russian front during the World War, 10:30 p. m. WMAL—John L. Fogarty, tenor, 7:45 p. m.; Marcel Rodrigo, Spanish barytone, concert of French and Spanish classics, 10 p. m.; Commerce Secretary Roper in another Cabinet series broadcast, 10:45 p. m.

WJSV—Bing Crosby and Lennie Hayton's Orchestra. Crosby singing four popular selections, two from his recent moving pictures, 8:30 p. m.; The Big Show, Lulu McConnell in another Mrs. Simpson skit, Gertrude Nielsen in more torch singing, Isham Jones' Orchestra, 9:30 p. m.; Evan Evans, barytone, and orchestra in half-hour concert, 10:45 p. m.

It cost N. B. C. $2,000 to put a phone call through to Mme. Litvinoff, in Moscow, for the Commissar in Washington Friday. But no one around the studios was heard saying it wasn't worth it. In fact, no one in the studios was saying anything about it at all. Most of the minds were too busy reading all the nice publicity in the papers and shaking hands with themselves. The President's trip to Warm Springs has taken No. 1 announcers at WJSV and N. B. C. stations out of town for a week. WJSV's Robert Trout spent the week-end reading about Warm Springs and Lord Calvert for Wednesday and Friday Presidential broadcasts. Carlton Smith will do the mike work for N. B. C.

A Chicago barber, H. P. Franke, likes Arthur Godfrey's handling of Navy and Marine band broadcasts so well he's got to thinking the WMAL, Breakfast Clubman is as good as the musicians, maybe a little better. He wrote Godfrey a letter and told him so.

This week finds five N. B. C. Capitol performers at the theaters. One of them is Bert Bagranoff, tenor, at the Earl. The others are the Four Dots, who left local studios for New York's Cotton Club and who are back in town at the Howard.

From several sources WJSV has heard sharp criticism of the way the hands have been receiving efforts of the young ladies who want to be announcers. It seems that during several auditions there has been considerable fawning by the boys in the control room. Investigating, one of the bosses was assured the young men merely had been laughing at little jokes of their own. The lady announcer aspirants had nothing to do with their mirch.

Auditions close Saturday, and a week from today the girls begin their air trials.

Dorothy Hoffman, blues singer, is the "guest artist" on WJSV first Woman's Hour broadcast at 10 o'clock this morning. Miss Hoffman wanted very much to sing with the Guy Lombardo Band. Guy couldn't use her, but one of his managers thought enough of her efforts to recommend her to WJSV's Al Chance.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings and New York Senator Royal S. Copeland, close Columbia's six-week series on cause and cure of crime in a WJSV broadcast from 3:30 to 4 o'clock this afternoon. Elder Michaux has been signed to make records from his Church of God for Victor. Victor means to do the recording when the Elder least suspects it. That's to keep him natural.

WOL is building its better local acts for network production. The minds have picked a score or so to which the chain will be asked to listen. Columbia's School of the Air Broadcast today, at 2:30 p. m., is a dramatization of the rise of a Negro kingdom in Haiti. Shirley Howard is on N. B. C.'s Mole Show, 7 p. m. today, Wednesday and Friday.

Alexander Woolcott changes time tonight, going to the mike at 9:15 o'clock. President William McClellan, of the Potomac Electric Power Co., broadcasts on the Chamber of Commerce Forum, WMAL, 8 o'clock tonight. House Speaker Rainey is an NRA discusser on Columbia at 9 o'clock tonight.

Inquiry Into Judge's Actions Starts Today

Miami, Fla., Nov. 19 (P).—A House Judiciary subcommittee tomorrow will begin an investigation into charges against the official conduct of Federal Judge H. R. L. Ritter, with exonerated or impeachment proceedings as the ultimate result.

Holding the spotlight in the hearing will be an inquiry by the committee of five into the appointment of receivers in bankruptcy cases by Judge Ritter and fees allowed those receivers.

20 U. S. Home Loan Agencies Now Chartered

36 More Partly Approved to Effect Federal Financing Plan.

Twenty charters have been granted to Federal Savings & Loan Associations in seven States, and preliminary approval has been given 36 more in 25 States, John H. Fahy, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, announced yesterday.

Each association will be a member of the Home Loan System. They are being formed to make possible financing of homes in communities where there are no other such facilities. Fahy pointed out that in many communities insurance companies and commercial banks have withdrawn from the home financing field.

"The Federal Home Loan Bank system," Fahy added, "is making hundreds of millions of dollars available in communities, both through established home finance institutions which are already members of the system, and likewise through the organization of local Federal Savings and Loan Associations."

"During the past five years it is estimated that an actual shortage of more than 800,000 family housing units has developed in the United States. Many communities are not only short of homes, but utterly lacking in any form of home financing agencies with all that they imply in making money available for construction, repairs and maintenance and employment of workers in the building industries."

Organizers for the new savings and loan banks and their States include Leo R. Hovman, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Delaware, and Samuel W. Borden, Virginia, Maryland and North Carolina.

Labor Looks To Arbitration, Says Wagner

He Points to Conciliation Results to Show Strikes Waning.

(Associated Press.) Success in changing labor psychology from insistence upon strikes toward a readiness for arbitration of disputes was claimed yesterday by Senator Wagner, chairman of NRA's labor board, in a survey of results obtained by his conciliation agency.

Wagner said the National Board alone already had settled more than half of the disputes affecting 300,000 workers, and that the number was being greatly increased by the work of 17 regional boards thus far established. Particularly significant, he said, was a volume of requests coming principally from labor, for establishment of new regional boards.

"To get rid of the whole idea of war to the limit and to substitute for it the idea of agreements through mediation was necessary in the recovery program was not to be hamstrung," Wagner said. "The requests for additional regional labor boards show that this change in psychology is taking place."

Starting Wednesday, the board will undertake one of its biggest jobs to date. That day and the next, elections will be held among the workers of the "captive" coal mines of southwestern Pennsylvania to choose representatives for collective bargaining. The mines of the H. C. Frick Coal & Coke Co., U. S. Steel subsidiary, which was the focal point in the miners' strike for union recognition, will ballot Thursday.

Lelia Ludwig Becomes Bride Of C. S. Morse

Will Live in Portsmouth After Honeymoon in South.

Middletown, Va., Nov. 19 (Sp.).—The home of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Ludwig was the scene of a lovely wedding here late yesterday when their daughter, Miss Lelia A. Ludwig, became the bride of Mr. C. S. Morse, of Portsmouth, Va. The Rev. W. P. Saunders, pastor of Middletown Methodist Church South, performed the ceremony, being assisted by the Rev. F. B. Wyand, of Strasburg, and the Rev. J. H. Abernathy, of Lovington, Va., friends of the family.

As guests gathered in the library, Miss Isabelle Hammack, of Washington, played "Because," by d'Harletot, and Mr. A. B. Haga, of Farmville, sang "I Love You Truly," by Carrie Jacobs-Bond. Miss Hammack played the wedding march from "Lohengrin."

Miss Ludwig was lovely in a claret velvet gown and wore a shoulder corsage of Johanna Hill roses. She and the bridegroom were unattended.

Following a reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Morse left on a Southern motor trip. They will be at home after December 1 at 231 North Elm avenue, Portsmouth.

Schoolgirls Meet Prince of Wales

Danville, Va., Nov. 19 (Sp.).—Touring England for their education Misses Frank and Lizora Schofield, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John Schofield, of Danville, accidentally met and spoke to the Prince of Wales while they were at Edinburgh.

With them were Miss Margaret Williams, of Winston-Salem; Miss Kathleen Dudley, of Roanoke, and Miss Catherine Elliott, of Washington.

The group had gone to Edinburgh Castle to be shown through the rooms on public view. Even the caretakers had not expected a sudden visit to the castle by the heir to the British throne. As he was leaving he encountered the American girls on the steps of the palace and spoke briefly with them before entering his car, doffing his hat as he left the scene.

Washington Women in Welfare Work

Mrs. Lewis Douglas Says Community Chest Is Best Aid to Needy.

Support of the Community Chest means the support of agencies doing a real service and eliminates "rackets," according to Mrs. Lewis W. Douglas, who "single shots" on behalf of this welfare organization. Mrs. Douglas feels that by devoting her time to the Chest she is in reality giving service to 60 separate agencies which collectively work out an entire social program for the city.

She says: "I am volunteer for the Community Chest because I feel that it does more good than any other organization that I know. By organizing all the agencies of Washington into one group, the Chest has made it possible for everyone to aid not a few 'pet charities' but to be of service to 60 agencies, all of their recognized agencies and not 'rackets'."

"I believe the Community Chest is the best way to reach the most people. Whereas before the founding of the Chest some people might receive aid from several agencies and others who were deserving received none, the Community Chest is able to have records of each family aided by each individual agency and there are no 'repeats'."

"I know that once a worker, always a worker for the Community Chest. There is something about the work that is fascinating; for once anyone becomes a Chest volunteer, he always remains a volunteer."

Coast Guard Women Brave Rough Sea Weather To Relieve the Sufferings of Shipwreck Victims

League Founded by Mrs. Frederick Billard Reaches Helping Hand to Seamen and Their Families in Distress.

By Katherine Smith.

"Wreck off the coast!" Men in shining oilskins hurry along the beach, ankle-deep in the swirling water. They carry flares that pierce the foam-laden darkness. Dimly they see the doomed vessel, writhing on the water, a helpless victim of the hungry sea.

A Coast Guard boat pushes out off the sand—swiftly cutting through the night—and disappears. A group of women huddle together on the shore, and wait. They have brought hot coffee, first aid equipment, medicines and blankets. The boat may bring back the dead or the dying, the wounded or the half-frozen, but this unit of the League of Coast Guard Women is ready to minister to their needs.

"Saving lives is only one of the things we do," said Mrs. Frederick C. Billard, who, with her husband, the late Rear Admiral Billard, founded the organization in 1922. "We feed and clothe destitute families of enlisted men, lend money and pay hospital bills. Sometimes we pay monthly sums to the widows of our men. These women often depend entirely on what we give them."

"One recent case was particularly heart-breaking," she continued. "The father, a Russian, had come to this country and enlisted with the Coast Guard air corps. They had been here only a few months when he went on an experimental flight off duty, cracked up, and was killed."

"His widow, who could hardly speak English, was left with two small boys, and a baby expected in a little while. She could get no pension, and no relief of any sort. We took this case over, paid her hospital bills when she had her baby, saw that the boys were taken care of, and managed to get her some work when she was able to do any. With the help our Coast Guard could give them, they are managing to get on comfortably."

"Sometimes we find families who are actually starving or suffering from lack of clothing. The unit has a rummage sale and raises money, or the women go through their own wardrobes and find clothing for them."

"Not long ago we found an old lady, a seaman's widow, living in the utmost squalor. One of our women rushed out and bought a supply of food, and since that time we have been sending her $25 a month. It isn't much but it will keep her alive."

"One life-saver came to us with a request for money. His little boy may need hospital care, his wife was going to have a baby. He borrowed a few hundred dollars and afterward paid it back on the installment plan. We charge no interest, and in this way a family in need can make a loan and return it when it is able and with little trouble."

"I visit the stations on inspection trips with the admiral. These Coast Guard women are the kindest people in the world. The families at the stations are in the worst of need, and come to them with a variety of troubles. We have to straighten out divorce cases and matrimonial tangles and all sorts of things."

The league at present consists of 900 members in the 34 units that are scattered all over the coast and around the Great Lakes. They are governed by a board of control of eight women in Washington.

Like the Red Cross, the League of Coast Guard Women is called upon in time of National disaster. During the Mississippi flood the league was responsible for the saving of 12,000 men, women and children in the flood district, who, with their personal belongings and live stock, including 30,000 cattle were removed to safe territory.

At the annual meeting of the league in Washington, November 22, Mrs. Billard will be made its first president emerita.

Stripes, Plaids, Pleats Enliven Fall Fashions

A plaid cheviot cotton, which has the appearance of flannel, is shown for golf dresses. These are simple "shirtmaker" dresses, with a zipper from waist to neckline and a skirt pleat front and back—not too many pleats to get in the way.

White is always the most popular color for resort dresses, but the soft pastels—maize, peach-pink, blue and green—are good—and it's going to be an unprecedented season for stripes and plaids.

These range from very fine stripes that give almost a solid color effect to bold ones, and from tiny diamond checks to huge plaids.

Linen is coarsely woven, and have a tweedy look.

Some of the jersey slacks for beach wear have great flares. Each leg is big enough for a skirt.

Boy Scouts Plan Tour.

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 19 (Sp.). Boy Scouts of Hagerstown and Washington County will make the first of a series of educational tours to Washington, December 8. Many public buildings and other points of interest in the Capital will be visited.

Relinquishment.

By Katherine Smith.

Slip quietly through the door And gently close it Behind you. I will wait outside, and watch The stars tremble.

Some one inside will meet you With upturned hands, and glad Bright eyes.

Stay with her. Her heart Has wept with loneliness, And I can coax mine To tremble less helplessly Than the stars.

Tiny Hat Takes Dashing Shape For Grid Wear

Pierrots and Stocking Caps Hold First Place Over New Sailors.

Hats worn at the major gridiron struggles this year are toned down considerably in color, but are vastly intriguing in line. Blacks and browns predominated noticeably at the most recent games.

While it is easy to sum up the color situation in a few words, pages could be written on types and silhouettes. One of the newest and most sparkling is the Pierrot cap, to be worn jauntily on the right side of the head. These caps, which have a high point on one side, are attractive in felt or in supple knitted fabrics.

Closely related to the Pierrot or clown cap is the stocking cap, adorned with a huge metal ring, which holds it in place on one side. Some wide-brimmed sailors, dipped over the right eye, are being worn, but they are rather impractical for a cold afternoon in the stadium, as their brim does not permit a coat collar to be pulled high about the throat.

The cloche-like felt, almost a classic in the hat realm, is appearing in a new guise. Its crown has been pushed and pinched and twisted into a variety of casual outlines, while the brim is rolled to frame the wearer's profile to the best possible advantage. Gay little feathers are tucked in one side of the grooved-in tailored band.

The new off-the-face models are distinctly in the minority, probably because they are difficult to wear. The few seen at the games were in dark-colored velvet.

Sport Shorts Made Of Horse Sheeting

Lowly Fabric Newest Whim of Fashion.

New York, Nov. 19 (AP)—Horse sheeting, formerly used only for racehorse blankets, has risen from its low estate to a sportswear fabric.

It's being used for women's shorts by Adler and Adler. With the shorts is worn a cravanne sweater coat, also of horse sheeting.

The practical thing about these coats is that water spots from wet bathing suits do not penetrate them. Another new fabric by this house for resort wear is the cotton they say it is the only cotton they've found that is really non-crushable.

Still another new fabric is organdy seersucker. It has a crisp, sheer look, and the familiar seersucker crinkle. Heavier seersuckers are still good, but are seen in new stripes and plaids.

Palm Beach clothes are extremely practical this year—quite a contrast to the spectacular fashions of business "boom" days.

Foliage Plants Brighten Home In Winter Time

Aspidistras, Potted Blooms, Ferns Bring Garden Charm Indoors.

What to do with the garden now? It is well asleep and will remain so a long time. Why not bring a bit of gardening into the house?

In most homes foliage plants grow best, but flowering plants are often a success. Sometimes the temperature of a house may be too high, or fumes of burning gas make the cultivation of indoor plants difficult. A little experimenting will determine the result.

Aspidistra, the plant with yellow stripes on the long, green leaves, is one of the best house plants because it will stand heat, cold, lack of sunshine and dust better than most varieties. It thrives in a sunny window or even in the shade, and will stand the sharp, cold winds brought in by open doors.

Ferns are favorites. They require a moist atmosphere than aspidistras, but they will thrive with little direct sunlight. Ferns are charming in window sills as their lacy foliage does not shut out the light, and adds gaiety to the window.

Some people buy potted flowering plants, renewing them from time to time as the blossoms go. Rather an expense, of course, but they are as lovely as cut flowers and far more lasting. Primroses are available now. They make charming gift plants.

Farmers Buy Pocketbooks.

Danville, Va., Nov. 19 (Sp.).—One of the hopeful auguries of the recovery is an increase in the sale of men's pocketbooks.

Dime stores and hardware stores are selling the old-fashioned type needed by farmers to take care of the money they are getting for their tobacco.

The appealing charm of the innocent type of beauty belongs to these two lovely young members of Washington society, say national beauty authorities. Left, is Mrs. John Bain, popular young society matron and the former Miss Jocelyn Hibberd, and right, is Miss Mary Louise Marsh, niece of Mr. Edward C. Gardner, of 2101 Connecticut avenue, who will make her debut on Christmas Day.

Birth Control Not Race Suicide, Says Mrs. Sanger

New Researches Show It Does Not Affect Population, She Insists.

Birth control has succeeded in meeting the attacks of those who represent it as synonymous with race suicide, Mrs. Margaret Sanger, foremost American exponent of the movement, who has just arrived in Washington, declared yesterday in an exclusive interview with the Washington Post.

"As a matter of fact," she said, "birth control neither adds to nor subtracts from the normal increase of population. Studies of population over long periods of time and in many countries have convinced experts that the increase bears a direct ratio to the ability of the territory under observation to support human life."

"If people are left to their own resources, to increase their kind beyond the possibility of its being maintained according to the living standard of the environment in which they find themselves, infant mortality will act as the check which reduces the adult population to the normal level. Or congestion will incite nations to war on each other and the reduction of population will be brought about in that way."

"Birth control simply means that the mother who has 12 children in a family which can only support four, will not suffer the immense misery of losing eight of her family through disease, malnutrition and like causes, but will be the happy and healthy mother of only four children—the four who were all she should have had."

"The latest proof of the working of this theory has been had recently in a report just issued by Prof. Carl Edin, of the University of Copenhagen."

"The poorest people of Copenhagen have for the past five years had access to birth control information. As a result, Dr. Edin finds that the poor are limiting the size of their families."

"But the intelligentsia of Copenhagen during the same period have increased their families, he reports, and the increase has been sufficient to precisely offset the decrease among the families of the poorer class."

"This astonishing fact he attributes to very simple causes. The burden of taxation of the intelligentsia for the support and relief of the poorer families has been lightened, and with the greater means they have been able to gratify their desire for as many children as they could rear and educate."

Mrs. Sanger will leave Washington today or tomorrow, but will return here for the January conference, she said.

The Poets Council of the National Woman's Party will hold its opening meeting of the season at Alva Belmont House, 144 B street northeast, on Tuesday, November 21, at 8:30 p. m. An interesting program is promised by the chairman, Mrs. Myrtle R. Patterson, who will preside.

The literary artists who will take part in the program are Dr. E. V. Wilcox, president of the Shakespeare Society, editor and scientist, and Mrs. Mabel Owens Wilcox, actress and dramatic director of the Shakespeare Society. They will give one of their unusual Shakespearean numbers. Miss Ruth Taunton, writer and publisher of Hollywood, Calif., and member of the Woman's Party, will make the opening address.

On the musical program Miss Margaret Louise O'Brien, a gifted lyric soprano of the South, will sing a group of Shakespearean lyrics and old Southern love songs, and Mrs. Howard J. Klossner, an accomplished pianist of St. Paul and Washington, who will play a group of special selections.

When mother steps out in her smart fall outfit, little daughter isn't far behind her in the way of style. She's headed children's fashions this fall. Days of pig tails and standard brim hats are gone. Little girls of modern times vie with their mothers in coiffures, trim frocks and saucy hats.

Recently a downtown store received a shipment of little hand-knitted berets and scarfs to match which were designed especially for children. They have a bright way about them that tempts mothers to see if they couldn't use them instead of daughter. But it's no use. The style is hers, but the size—that's daughter's! Price, $1.

Just as you change the shade of your powder when winter comes, so should you adapt your perfume to colder weather. Some kinds which are at their best when the body maintains an even warmth are scarcely discernible when wintry influences prevail. An F street shop has a cold weather triumph which suggests the warmth and luxury of sailes.

It has the fragrance of a bouquet with something of the fresh, clean scent of lemon about it. An aroma of this subtle kind is neither heavy nor light enough to claim a type, but suits itself to the individual.

The bottles come in four sizes, ranging from $3.75 to $20.

Woolly Frocks Boon, as Frost Nips Our Noses

And Their Bright Colors Help Cheer Our Spirits.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A sudden leap and a bound, and winter was upon us! She reached out with her icy fingers and took us firmly in hand. Kelly she stares and glares and reproaches us for unpreparedness.

As we shiver and shake in our thin house dresses her attitude grows colder.

We sigh regretfully at the thought of those warm wool dresses still in the shops. But they won't be long, we determine. Some of those rabbit hair dresses which are being featured by a downtown store will cheer our hearts with their bright colors and keep us warm and comfortable in spite of winter's vindictive breezes.

Five styles, ranging in size from 14 to 20, in gay Chinese colors, give us a wide choice. And their price of $3.59 is an added incentive to choose.

When night comes on we must depend on stacks of covers to keep us warm if we sleep in the frivolous nightgowns and light silk pajamas were inclined to like. But if we do some sturdy balbriggans we can dispense with a blanket or two and rest in quiet assurance that we won't dream of icebergs and snowflakes.

A large department store has in a new supply of these which bargain for our favor with more than promise of warmth. Crew necks, gaily checked and striped patterns, and soft shades of maize, green, blue, and rose give them loads of style appeal.

The necessity for ransacking the dusty shelves of old book stores for good books at low prices is a thing of the past. With the offer which a large department store is making it's a matter of a moment and a dollar to pick out three or four books bound in genuine leather.

There are six sets which include such gems as Hamlet, The Tempest, Richard II, Rubens, Golden Treasury, Dickens' Christmas Tales, Lamb's Tales from Shakespeare, Gulliver's Travels and many others.

Beauty is within the grasp of every woman who aligns herself with the master beauty type to which she belongs, and expresses her latent charm through proper coiffure, cosmetics, costuming and jewelry.

This interview with a lovely Washington debutante of the innocent type, is the thirteenth article in a series telling the essential qualities of lasting beauty.

By Elizabeth Young.

The golden haired girl in the sable-collared green wool walking dress leaned sideways in her chair to rest a gentle hand on Jock's head as she talked.

Jock regarded her with meekly adoring eyes. He is an ebony black Scottish terrier.

"Jock's a regular member of the family," said his mistress, 18-year-old Mary Louise Marsh, by way of introduction.

National authorities on beauty have said Miss Marsh is one of three Washington girls who portray the charm of the innocent type of beauty; safeguarded as much by her own mental attitude as by the instinctive protection which her unswerving appeal arouses in others.

Niece and protégée of Mr. Edward C. Gardner, of 2101 Connecticut avenue, and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Gardner, of Pittsburgh, Miss Marsh will be presented to Washington society on Christmas Day, with a tea-dance at the Sulgrave Club.

Wears Blue in All Shades.

"This is the only green dress I have," she glanced fleetingly downward at her frock. "I wear blue, in all shades, more than any other color for day time, in semitailored and knitted things."

"And I'm quite the knitter, by the way." Her blue-green eyes beneath their thick dark fringe of lashes, gleamed with humor. "I've been knitting the skirt of a projected suit since last July, and that skirt just seems to go on indefinitely. I'm about 15 inches above the hemline at the present time."

Miss Marsh's hobby is collecting French perfumes.

"It started about two years ago. Just a whim. Probably because of the odd beautiful bottles perfumes come in, though I take a great fancy to some of the contents."

"Bleu de Chine," which means "Lotus Flower"—though I don't know where the "bleu" comes in, which is made by Issey, is my favorite. Elizabeth Arden's "Tuberose," while not a French perfume, is very lovely. "Dance in Nuit" and Chanel's No. 5 and No. 22, and the Prince Matchabelli scents are quite nice, too."

"Do I wear them? Oh, certainly. I suit the scent to the costume, rather than to the mood, which seems to be the catchword in perfume promotion. The so-called alluring scents for evening, the lighter flower-like perfumes for day."

She likes evening clothes that are "especially different and striking; not lavish, but really unusual." And she seems the type to wear them. She is strikingly different in appearance, quite tall—5 feet 7 inches—with a beautiful carriage of her shining head and graceful body.

Soft rich velvets, in black or white, are her choice for winter evening dresses, achieving distinction through subtle cut rather than ornamentation.

She never wears jewelry, with the exception of an occasional ring for evening.

"I don't go in for earrings. I would look like a Christmas tree if I did. I'm too tall," she analyzed simply.

She likes furs, in moderation, "everything in moderation, for that matter," she added.

"I have a black broadtail evening wrap; a leopard skin coat; a silver fox fur. I'm afraid this sounds like boasting of my possessions."

Seldom Wears Cosmetics.

"I must confess I'm no connoisseur of cosmetics. I wear them very little. In fact, sometimes I don't wear them at all. And I really don't think about my skin. I don't think a young person needs to, nor should. I think they should wait until the time they really need to."

Her skin is a rose-flushed tan, exquisitely bright and clear.

"As for hair, that's another matter. One's locks are apt to become unruly unless one cares for them. I have my hair shampooed and waved at a good shop about every two weeks. My latest discovery in a hairdresser is Charles at the Shoreham."

Miss Marsh wears her hair short, swept smoothly back from her forehead, half revealing small, beautiful close-set ears, and brushed up in a loose, softly natural curl along the nape of her neck.

"I don't believe in permanents for blond hair, either," she declared. "Not for mine, at any rate. It makes it too dry, rather lifeless."

When she smiles, quick dimples play like sunshine across her cool young face. Her mouth, though sweetly curved, seems thoughtful. Her short nose is the slightest bit Roman. Her dark brows are broader than those the modern maiden would deem desirable. They are spaced in two clean arcs that give character to her expression.

Dislikes Vivid Nail Polish.

"I am giving my nails a rest from glossy polish. I don't care for those vivid nail colors, anyway. There's nothing distinctive about them, anymore. And I never did like to do or wear anything that attracts attention to myself. Don't I sound terribly sedate?" Her nails are the enviable almond shape, worn long enough to accentuate the length of her long-fingered, fine-knined hands.

Miss Marsh described herself as "an ordinary sleeper."

"I never was a 12-hour sleeper," she said. "I always get up early, even when I've been out late. I feel I want to take advantage of all the daytime I can get. And I'm much too busy to take any rest in the daytime. There's always so much to do."

"I never diet," she continued. "Well, almost never. I guess I do at times, but not regularly. I never eat potatoes, and I just cut down on starches and sweets for a spell when I find myself taking on weight."

Likes Outdoor Sports.

Miss Marsh takes long walks every day, principally, she stated, for Jock's benefit, and incidentally because she so much enjoys walking.

Horseback riding is her favorite outdoor sport, and golf holds second place.

"In summer, I take in nearly everything in the sports line," she added. "I like tennis pretty well, and swim a good deal."

Miss Marsh was educated in Pittsburgh, and finished at Miss Maderia's school here last year. She has no particular ambition at present other than to travel. She has spent much time in California and expects to go South after the first of the year.

Art Show Planned By Carolina Groups.

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 19 (AP).—An exhibition of paintings by professional artists of North Carolina and of handicrafts from Western North Carolina will feature the annual meetings of the State Literary and Historical Association, the State Folklore Society and the State Art Society here December 6 to 8.

The art society will open its exhibition December 6 Dr. A. R. Newcomb, secretary of the State Historical Commission, announced today. Miss Ruth Faison Shaw, of New York and Rome, and Miss Lella Mecklin, of Washington, secretary of the American Federation of Arts will speak.

Prose of Elinor Wylie Now Collected in Invaluable Omnibus Volume.

The prose of Elinor Wylie has been collected in a volume issued by Knopf today. Its 879 pages contain four novels, "Jennifer Lorn," "The Venetian Glass Nephew," "The Orphan Angel," and "Mr. Hodge and Mr. Hazard," as well as a group of eleven short pieces never before printed in book form. Each of these five sections of "The Collected Prose of Elinor Wylie" has a separate preface. These were written by Carl Van Vechten, Carl Van Doren, Isabel Paterson, William Rose Benet and Stephen Vincent Benet, which is about as distinguished a list of American literary critics as one could find. But the writings of Mrs. Wylie (nee Hoyt, of an old Washington family) are eternally worth their praise. Only one more commendation need be given for this book, that it has been designed by W. A. Dwiggins, one of the country's great typographers.

Willis Cather's first novel, "Alexander's Bridge," now running serially in the Golden Book magazine, has just been reissued by Houghton Mifflin.

Michael Arlen writes from Cannes to Doubleday Doran, his publisher: In this country, that he has settled down to work on a new novel about London. It is to deal with the period 1890-94, but so many interesting difficulties are presented on that wide canvas that he does not know when it will be finished.

Robinson Explains Beautifully.

A poem, "Tallier," by Edwin Arlington Robinson. (Macmillan, $1.75). The author of the classical "Tristram" now treats the verse of a handsome and misbegotten male's quest for peace "with a capital." Poor Tallier requires a year's marriage to the unfathomable Karen, "cool and lovely as a trout," to find out that Althea is the girl he should have wed in the first place. Father confessor, counselor and adjustment agent to them all is the loquacious Doctor Quick, the poem's central character. In a book abounding in bright and never too abstruse dialogue, he has the pithiest speeches. Skeptical from the beginning that he is not Tallier, will find that Tallier with Karen, he gives counsel to all three without the least urging and in the end compliments himself unstintingly upon his handiwork. Karen frowns again to read her tale and Hume; Althea, of the orange-colored hair and Tallier, confessing he would "eat lizards to forget" his quest for Peace—all are satisfied.

Taking this modern theme, Mr. Robinson has written an exceedingly amusing narrative poem. Which is not to say that it is not substantial; it is too firmly grounded in everyday life to be that. Most of the lines have exquisite beauty. The description of Althea's despair, told in the very beginning, is a masterful dissection of a woman's heart after being left by a man.

U. S. Women Are Lucky, Says Miss Delafield

They're So Sociable, While English Matrons "Hole Themselves In."

By Theodore Hall.

"You can't imagine how much luckier it is to be an American woman than an English woman living in the provinces!" Miss E. M. Delafield, English novelist now visiting this country in a series of hasty jaunts from pillar to post, cocked her turbaned head on one side and leaned forward in the hotel lobby chair. She had ten minutes before rushing off to Mount Vernon.

"Bridge—I detest it—but bridge is better far than the insulated life of our married women. At least it's a contact with other man beings. But no English woman in the provinces would drive 10 miles to see a friend. Even if she unavoidably met someone at a garden party or something, she inclined toward a friendship, she wouldn't make another move. Bound by tradition, you know. You don't have that here. You're lucky."

She tossed her head, refused a cigarette. "It makes me wild! Our women settle down after their marriage, with house, servants, children and husband as the only things in their world, and act as if life had nothing more to offer. That's why I wrote 'The Way Things Are.'"

"Oh, you read my book just last night? That was nice of you! Tell me, did you have to, or did you like it?"

"Yes? Oh, thanks! But that was written when I was much younger. Really! I wrote it to show our women just how they were. No make up, you know. Perhaps I did make it a little too black. But you've no idea how they hole themselves in!"

"I dramatized that book. People said it wouldn't succeed. But it played seven months in London, and now it's in the provinces. Seven months there already. Wives go and say 'That's just like my husband!' That's what people say of my books, too. But I'm not such a formidable observer as you think. Yes, you might call it autobiographical, though it's only slightly so. I'm married, you see, have two sons, and live in the country. That's all."

"I suppose 'The Provincial Lady' is much the same sort of thing. Only it's tighter, shorter, more story. And you read my latest, 'Gay Life.' They say it's no defeatist. She smiled quickly. "Oh, I know what people say of my books! But read 'Gay Life.'"

"You've got to learn courage for yourself. You've got to hurt some-

Half Forgotten Romances of American History

Benjamin Franklin—Deborah Read

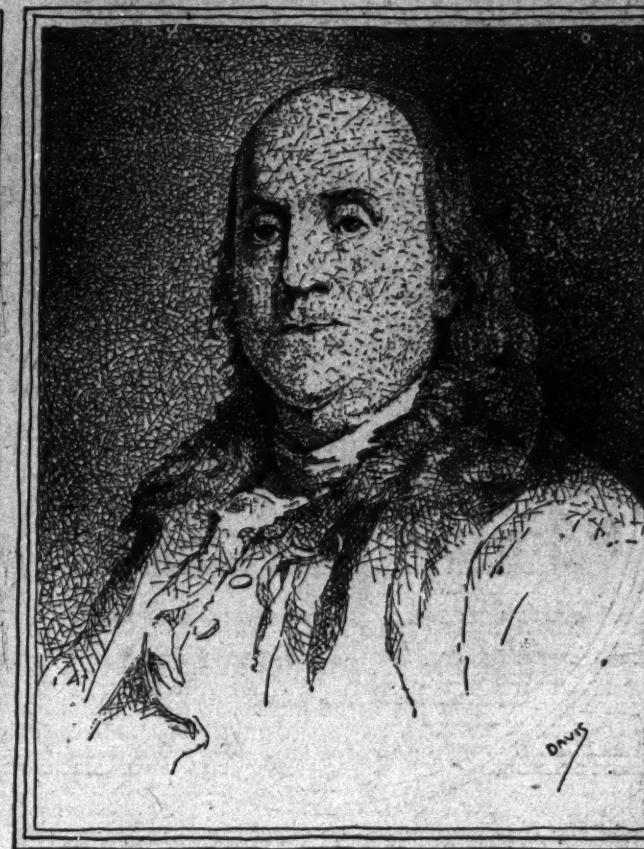

By Elisabeth Poe.

It was a serene Sunday morning in the city of Philadelphia in the October of 1723. The good citizens of the quaint Quaker town for the most part were gathered in their meeting houses waiting "for the spirit to move them" as the Friends describe the wave of religious feeling that broke the pregnant silence in their church devotions. But all Philadelphia was not in church. In a doorway, with a fan flung above it, of a house in Market street near Fourth, a rosy-cheeked Quaker maiden stood watching for possible passers by. Her girlish charms had already won quiet encomiums from the Quaker lads of the community but Deborah Read would have none of them. Her's was a valorous spirit and she longed for a Prince Charming who should ride into her life from over the hills far away.

At the corner came a stranger lad. He was ill dressed, under his arm was tucked a huge roll and he was eating steadily on another one. A strange figure this in the Philadelphia streets but one destined not to be forgotten by the townsmen for many a generation to come.

Deborah laughed aloud at the ludicrous figure he cut with the rolls. At the sound of her merry laughter he glanced up from his moving repast. With the eye of a pretty woman he never quite lost at any time in his life, Benjamin Franklin, for it was indeed he, noted her good looks, laughed back at her in appreciation of her joking spirit—and passed on. But he had not passed on from Deborah Read's life. The 17-year-old Benjamin Franklin already had seen life. In Boston he had risen to the post of editor of the Courant, a tiny paper brought out by James Franklin, his brother. The genius of the younger brother Benjamin had led to a parting of the ways. Josiah Franklin, the first in America of that name, father of Benjamin, his eighth child by his second wife, did not interfere between his sons. When the harsh words came, Benjamin thought his brother had grown jealous of his ability and "Jama" no doubt, felt that Benjamin's had become far too small for his rapidly swelling head.

Benjamin cut the Gordian knot by running away from the fraternal strife and his apprenticeship as well. Working his way to Manhattan on a sailing sloop, he found small encouragement there and pressed on to Philadelphia. For the immediate present Franklin's first job was to find work. He was employed for a short time in a local printery. His employer, Samuel Keimer, one day announced to him he had found him a room in the home of a merchant—Read by name. When Benjamin arrived at his new home, Mr. Read, after greeting him kindly, stepped to the door. "Debby," he called. Through the door came the young girl who had laughed at Benjamin eating his rolls that first day in Philadelphia. One long glance and the die was cast. Cupid had scored again, and another romance of American history had begun.

The romance was interrupted, however, for young Franklin soon sailed away to England on a wild-goose chase in regard to a printing shop of his own. He promised to return soon and make Deborah Read his wife. As a matter of fact, he wanted to marry her before he started, but Deborah Read, as well as himself, was only 18 years old and the wiser counsels of their elders prevailed. Benjamin sailed away vowing eternal faithfulness, as youth has from the beginning of time.

The allurements of England proved too much for the youthful vows of Franklin. "Out of sight, out of mind," and the broken-hearted Deborah received but a brief letter from her willow faint during his two years' absence. Benjamin, on his part, deserves some consideration for extenuating circumstances. He had been busy at two famous printing houses, Palmer's and Watts in Batholomew's Close. But there was no excuse for the entanglement in which he found himself involved with a young woman milliner, a fellow lodger. In fact, it cost him his job and some of the friendships he had built up in the new land.

In England Franklin won fame also as the Water-American, for he drank only water while his companions at the Watts' Press had a drinking bout. He was the wife of Richard Bache, successor to Franklin as Postmaster General. In 1774, before the fires of Revolution fairly blazed, Deborah Franklin died while her distinguished husband was in London on a mission for his country. His grief, it is said, was almost uncontrollable. As soon as he could be made a pilgrimage to America to kneel at her grave.

In the 14 years that remained to him of life without Deborah, he made many women friends. But none of them were ever asked to succeed her as his wife. To the hour of his death in 1790 he mentioned her daily and it was apparent of him that where Deborah was concerned:

"The heart that has truly loved never forgets. But as truly loves on to the close. As the sunflower turns on her god when he sets. The same look that she gave when he rose."

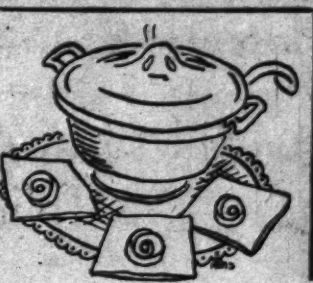

Pet Coyote Frolics With Big Police Dog

But the Little Fellow Howls at Night, So May Land in Zoo.

Leonardtown, Md., Nov. 19. (Spl.) A young coyote is the strange pet of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Rouch, of Charlotte Hall. It is the fast friend of their big German police dog, with which it frolics as if it were a puppy. The coyote, sent to Mr. and Mrs. Rouch last June from northern Kansas, looks very much like a fox. Although it has been six months in captivity, it is reluctant to make friends with humans. The coyote is an expert at catching any unwary chicken that comes within reach, and prefers raw meat for food. Owing to his savage nature he is kept on a long chain, and one of his latest accomplishments is howling all night in true coyote fashion, which trick may cause his banishment to the zoo.

The Family Marketer

She Finds Soup-Nuts That Swell Like Noodles in Hot Broth.

The Marketer turned the collar of her raccoon coat up around her frosted ears and looked anxiously around for shelter. Closed doors, keep the cold out, and seeing one, she went up to it and turned the knob. Once inside, she looked around her. A bright-faced lady was leaning against a box of prunes, munching a cracker that she took from a box beside her.

"Have one? They're awfully good. Thank you, I will. Didn't you have any breakfast?" the Marketer asked.

"Yes, but these crackers are good, and I like to be chewing on something." The Marketer agrees that they are. They have a delicate flavor that would make a delicious background for an appetizer, with an anchovy perched on top. They are 15 cents for a 12-ounce box.

"What are those things in that bag over there?" "They are soup-nuts. You put them in soup just as you serve it, they swell up like noodles, and taste very much like them, too. Ten cents a package."

The Marketer was beginning to get thirsty. "That looks like sweet cider over there."

"Yes," said the market lady; "15 cents for half a gallon."

The Marketer discovered in the same shop dried assorted fruits, prunes, apricots, peaches and what not, selling at 2 pounds for a quarter. The prunes by themselves are the same price.

Mixed nuts, walnuts, almonds and pecans (unsalted), are 23 cents a pound. Black walnut meats are 39 cents a pound. Chestnuts are two pounds for 25 cents.

Here's a delicious way to fix pecans or other nut meats: Cook a cup of maple sirup until a small amount forms a soft ball of cold water. Cool until lukewarm and beat until sirup begins to thicken, then drop one pecan in at a time, coat with sirup, and remove with a fork. Drop on waxed paper. If sirup begins to thicken before all the nuts are dropped, thin it slightly with a few drops of hot water.

Shy Child Requires More Companions

When Molly was 13 she was allowed one summer to visit the family of a schoolmate for a week. When she got to her friend's home she was seized with homesickness, but for some reason could not get home and had to stay the week out. That week was a period of torture. She could not eat, and was possessed by fears of every kind for her absent family, and haunted the mail box looking for letters.

She was quite as wretched physically and mentally as if she had a disease, yet even her family took it as a joke, and refused to see why she needed to make quite such a fuss about it. It never occurred to them that Molly needed treatment for homesickness quite as definitely as if she had a chronic ailment.

As a little child she had, by force of circumstances, lived a very lonely and shut-in life. When she began to go to school she had none of the easy give and take of her companions. Her shyness was taken for snobbery, and she found herself excluded from companionship.

Had Molly's mother been more keenly alive to her daughter's shortcomings, or had she had the foresight to avoid them, much unhappiness and readjustment might have been avoided.

She would have realized that the child was leading an abnormal life, and would have led her to seek companionship of her own age.

Thanksgiving's Many Occasions Bring Out All Kinds of Coats

Directed by Amos Parrish

New York, Nov. 19.—Is it going to be over the river and far away to grandmother's house? This Thanksgiving? Or church and dinner in the city? Or a football game and turkey afterward? Whatever folks' plans may be, we think you'll agree that so far as clothes go, coats will have an important place in them.

Those luxurious black coats will go to the dress-up Thanksgivings. Sleek, suede broadcloths, and soft nubby textures, elegant with generously piled on furs... Persian lamb, mink, or silver fox. And some with kolinsky, beaver and cashmere.

You'll be very much in fashion, too, if you've picked a brown to show off your red-gold hair. Or a dark green, an eel gray, a wine or navy.

Furs Will Appear.
Of course Thanksgiving will be a big day for fur coats. The minks, the caraculs and the kidskins will go calling and to the fashionable restaurants. As will muskrats and lapins. And you'll notice that the three-quarter length, slightly swag coat with straight skirt and a little sleeve fullness will be what most everybody likes.

Then for those Thanksgivings in the country or in the stadium. Woolly tweeds that put up a stiff resistance to the sweeping wind. Bright red or green coats that flash against the countryside like belated autumn leaves. Most of these coats wear immense fur collars... often raccoon or lynx... as dependable insurance against the cold.

Some will want to try that smart new fashion of plain unfurled coats, with high buttoning and little round collars. Then they can splash on bright scarfs and gloves and hats in the new way.

As for that perennial football-goer, the raccoon coat—it will have some competition this year in the new inexpensive and effective processed lambskin in rich beaver-brown. Australian silver baby bear, gray with white splashes, will be out, too. And a few leopards and civet cats.

Write for Leaflet on Table Decorating.
Of course, if you're to be the hostess, your coats is the last thing you're worrying about in connection with Thanksgiving. How big a turkey and what to do with the table come first. Which is why we're reminding you again of our leaflet on ways of arranging tables for the feast. Send for it today, by all means, if you need help.

The Return of the Native.

A novel in short stories, "Old Home Town," by Agnes Sligh Turnbull. (Revel, $1.75).

By a series of apparent misfortune, Steven Martin, a 50-year-old salesman and Jersey commuter to New York, has his long-cherished dreams thrust upon him. In one and the same day, he is notified by his wife that she wants a divorce, and by his doctor that he must give up his job and retire to a country atmosphere. This gentle man, who abominates New York, and after 20 years of perfect patience and domestic fidelity, has also come to abominate his wife, goes back to the small town where he was born. Quietly, privately jubilant amid the sincerest commiserations of his business friends, he returns to the friends of his childhood.

Though Martin does not appear again in the book, these childhood friends are brought forward, one by one, in a series of short stories related by local and cross-references. They are chapters, really, in a greater story of which New Salem, the typical but not hypothetical country village, is the beloved central character. Each in turn, its inhabitants are portrayed in a touching incident or laudable action, always with sympathy and with a special, instinctive feeling for village life.

The book throughout is essentially fresh and charitable. People who have a quiet sorrow which they keep to themselves, people who live in any way for small villages or farm life, will be touched and pleased. In each story is a sting of tears, fleeting and showery as April weather or salt spray, and a laugh or two for good measure. Above all, there is genuine sympathy and no pretense.

Toy Animal Field Gay Riot of Color

Chicago, Nov. 19. (P.)—Blue horses with red-lined ears and plaid monkeys—they're here, and so are pink rabbits, pin-striped dogs and yellow cats, as the advance guard of the new 1933 Christmas toys. The plush teddy bear, the stuffed dog and the fuzzy white kitten are back, too, but they have some rivals as pigs, in threes. Wolves, too, big and bad, are making their debut in toyland.

Another rising star in the toy animal field is the donkey. Oh, yes, the elephant is there, too. Both can be found stuffed and mounted on wheels to be pulled. And they are in sizes large enough to rival the hobby horse.

There is a new lamb out—a modelistic bit of fleece. His yellow-lined ears are large and floppy. His long, stuffed legs are floppy, too, and they won't do for him to stand on.

Last year's blondes are being turned into this year's redheads with a new wig in the doll department. And when it comes to make-up, well, seeing is believing how much good a touch of paint does dolly.

Business Rises Sharply Under Buying Upturn

Many Factors Pointed to as Aids in Strong Improvement.

New York, Nov. 19 (AP)—Business statistics of the past week registered what appeared to many statisticians as the most distinct advance since July.

Business analysts said it was perhaps too soon—that figures now available were too smattering—to draw definite conclusions that the protracted slackening of industrial output since the July peak had been checked.

Nevertheless, the showing was widely regarded as decidedly cheering. Some observers pointed out that the inflationary implications of the decline in the dollar in the last fortnight may well have prompted more active building up of inventories, giving the improvement a trace of the speculative flavor of that of last summer.

Other observers, however, pointed to more fundamental factors in the improvement, such as the expanded consumer buying power resulting from the increased employment already recorded and anticipation of further gains. Some also pointed to the Federal Reserve Administration's plans of adding some 4,000,000 persons to pay rolls during the winter months.

It was also suggested that inventories of goods built up during the early summer manufacturing spurt had been fairly well moved into consumption and that foreign inquiry for American goods was improving in spots as result of the dollar decline.

Furthermore, it appeared that heavy industries were feeling more effectively the stimulus of the increasing public works expenditures. Moody's combined index of freight car loadings, electric power production, and steel ingot production moved up 1.9 points, to 64.4, after falling almost steadily from its 1933 peak of 83.7, reached in July, to 62.5 last week. This index is based on the average for 1928 as 100.

Forum to Hear Dr. Marvin on Bank Morals

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the George Washington University, will be the principal speaker at the second forum dinner meeting of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, to be held at Hay-Adams House, Wednesday evening, according to announcement yesterday.

Dr. Marvin, whose subject will be "The Beginning of Banking Morals," is an outstanding educator and economist. After attending Stanford University he entered the University of Southern California, receiving his bachelor of arts degree in 1915. The following year he entered Harvard University, from which school he received his M. A. and Ph. D. degrees.

In 1923, the University of New Mexico conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Laws. Dr. Marvin is a member of several legal and educational fraternities, the Cosmos, University and Metropolitan Clubs. He saw active service during the World War as captain in the aviation section of the Army and now holds the rank of lieutenant colonel in the U. S. Reserve Corps.

Dr. Marvin has had a wide experience in the field of education, serving in the capacities of instructor, professor, director and president of institutions of learning. Mr. Towson stated that his intimate knowledge of the problems of finance, coupled with the detached viewpoint and academic perspective which are his, will assure to local bankers a most interesting address.

Mr. Towson stated that a number of reservations had already been made and he predicted a large attendance at this meeting.

Ozarks Drew King's Fortune

Louis XIV and John Law Spent $200,000,000 in Gold Hunt.

Joplin, Mo., Nov. 19 (AP)—King Louis XIV of France and John Law, master promoter, sank $200,000,000 into extravagant mine explorations in the Ozark region, and went bankrupt.

Yet, in the tri-State area of Missouri, Arkansas and Kansas alone more than a billion dollars' worth of lead and zinc concentrates have been mined.

King Louis, gay and spendthrift ruler, granted letters of patent in 1712 to all of the Ozarks, then a part of Louisiana territory owned by the French, to explore fully the region for silver and gold.

The Mississippi Co., promoted by Law, profits in which were shared by the king, undertook the exploration work. Philip Renault, one of the king's master miners, accompanied by 500 black slaves from San Domingo, and a number of expert mineralogists, came to the Ozarks in 1719.

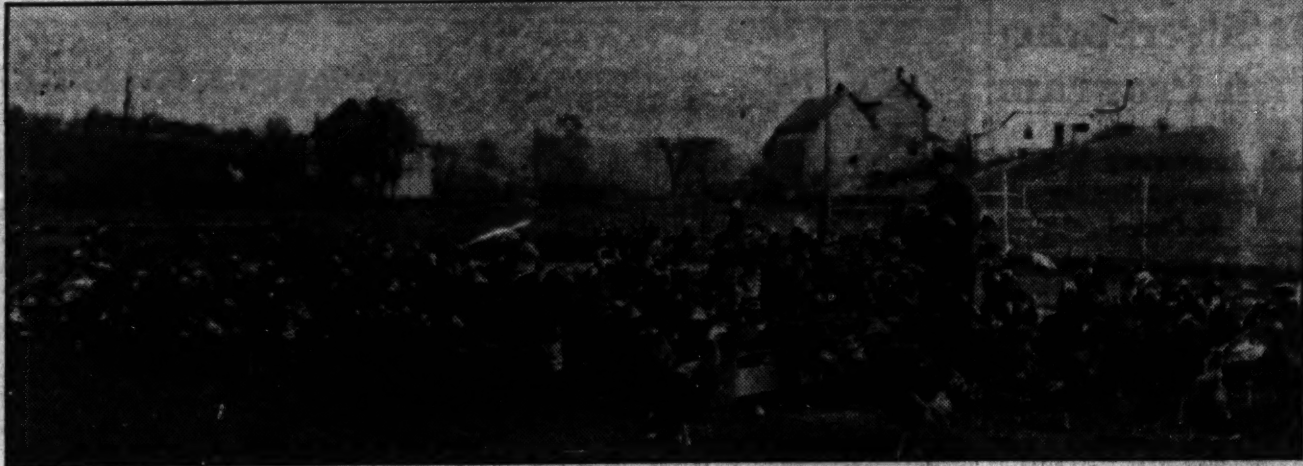

The first real discovery in the Joplin field was made by an Indian, David Harland, half-breed Cherokee from North Carolina. Harland found lead along Shoal Creek near the present site of Joplin in 1835.

However, William Tingle, a Scotchman, generally is credited with having been the first miner in this field.

Since the discovery of the tri-State area, more than five times as much lead and zinc have been mined and sold as Louis XIV squandered in "locating" it.

One Flock of the 25,000 Turkeys Ready for Capital Market

One of the hundreds of flocks of turkeys in the Virginia-West Virginia portions of the Shenandoah Valley which are to go on the metropolitan markets this week. Buyers of the choice fowl estimate that fully 25,000 of the birds will be marketed this season, the popular price, on foot, being 18 cents per pound.

Bankers Back U. S. Guaranty For Depositors

Group Supports R. F. C. Plan, Hits Permanent Insurance Law.

Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP)—Cooperation with the Government's temporary deposit insurance plan and with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's proposal to strengthen the banking structure through the injection of new capital, was urged upon the Nation's bankers today in a report by the Association of Reserve City Bankers.

The report, described as "the first comprehensive analysis" of the deposit insurance law, expressed opposition, however, to the permanent plan scheduled to go into effect on July 1, 1934, contending it would be "un-American, unfair and unsound."

Instead of a permanent deposit insurance program, the association recommends a "sound fundamental revision of the whole banking structure."

"We conclude," said John H. Hogan, chairman of the commission that devoted six months to a study of the situation, "that the way to assure bank depositors of true safety lies in so improving the banking system that losses to depositors can not occur, rather than adopting some plan of spreading the losses after they have occurred."

The permanent plan set up by the Glass-Steagall bill, said the report, "ignores the causes of bank failure and deals only with consequences."

Concerning the temporary plan, which goes into effect January 1, and the R. F. C. proposal, Chairman Hogan said:

"If such things as these which assist in building up the banking structure to a sounder condition and remove uncertainty, it is the first job in which bankers should interest themselves."

"We believe strongly, however, that these are but temporary measures and that the real objective is a sounder banking system. We join heartily with the public in its demand for safety of bank deposits."

The commission included Robert V. Fleming, Washington; Thomas B. McAdams, Richmond; and Morton M. Prentiss, Baltimore.

W. W. Kenner, research professor of international finance at Princeton University, acted as economic adviser.

Closing of Rail Shops Fought

Union Protests Furlough of 2 Weeks Ordered by B. and O.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 19 (SPL)—The order closing down the Baltimore and Ohio major shops for two weeks beginning tomorrow has been protested by the Cumberland Federation of Shop Crafts.

Secretary Randolph Robinson, of the crafts, received the following telegram from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor:

"Regret to learn that shops will be closed down as stated in your message. Such action is not in accordance with the spirit of the national recovery act, which seeks to overcome, rather than increase unemployment. Will take up your complaint with the Federal coordinator of transportation."

Robinson says the shops really closed November 16, as they have been operating on a four-day week. He says altogether 2,000 men are affected. The furlough will end December 4. The shut-down, it is said, was ordered by the company to keep within the budget for November.

Studebaker Shipments Rise. South Bend, Ind., Nov. 19 (AP)—Shipments of new models to domestic dealers during the first half of November exceeded previous records for several years, the Studebaker Sales Corporation of America announced today. The total shipped was 4,208 units, the highest figure for any half-month in 21 months, and exceeded the first 15 days of November, 1932, by 1,056 per cent, the corporation announced.

Foreign Trade Improves. Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP)—The Illinois Manufacturers Association reported today foreign trade has enjoyed substantial impetus since the United States went off the gold standard. The survey said sales to South America and South Africa, particularly electrical refrigerators and telephone equipment, increased sharply.

Contracts Total $36,951,000. New York, Nov. 19 (AP)—Heavy engineering contracts awarded in the week ended November 13 totaled $36,951,000, the publication Engineering News-Record reported today.

"Not Worth a Continental" President Should Have Carried Revolutionary Analogy Further

By Ralph West Robey.

Perhaps President Roosevelt was being merely a bit facetious in his Georgia address when he drew the analogy between the American Revolution and the philosophies and experiments of the present Administration. Certainly it is not an analogy anyone heretofore has considered worthy of serious study. Nevertheless, inasmuch as the President threw it into the argument, it is regrettable he did not carry the comparison a bit further.

More specifically, it is regrettable that he did not carry the analogy on into the question causing us much concern at present. All of us, I feel sure, would like to know just what there was in this earlier experience that supports the present monetary policy of justifying terms as "Tories" all those who oppose what is being done with our currency. And I, at least, should like to hear him explain away the old saying, "not worth a continental."

In other words, I should like to know just what benefits the ruin of the currency in the 1770's and 1780's was to the new Nation. Were conditions better by the fact that currency sank lower and lower until finally it reached virtually zero? Did this help business activity? Did it put men to work? Did it cause an outburst of new construction? Did it enhance the credit standing of the struggling colonial Government? Did it make it easier to raise funds for meeting expenses necessary to establishment and operation of the new Government?

These strike me as fair questions to ask anyone who selects such an experience as the American Revolution in order to get a derogatory label for his opponents. However, in having the question answered it might be advisable to permit a certain leeway of historical experience. Most of us, I think, would agree that if it could be shown any case approximating our own at present, even in the broadest outline, where a nation has gained by a policy of undermining its currency.

Those of us who have spent our lives studying money, credit and prices know of no such example. We can cite cases where a nation has ceased its foreign debt burden by repudiation, either directly by refusing to pay or indirectly by wrecking its currency.

We know of no instance, however, in which a nation has gained domestically by such policies, and certainly not of any nation having been able to pull itself out of a depression by currency manipulation.

Neither do we know of any cases where the people of the nation have found inflation desirable. On the contrary, they all remember it as a nightmare with one case such as Germany and Austria, but in what currently is termed as having been "controlled inflation," such as in France.

The answer made to all of this, of course, is that we are not facing currency ruination. We are told there is no danger of our going the way of Germany or even the way of France—there is no chance we shall ever get to the point where it might be said that the American dollar is "not worth a continental."

Perhaps this answer is true. Our "Tories," however, would like to see some definite evidence of it. Only a few months ago they were assured there was no chance that powers under the Thomas inflationary amendment would be used. They were also assured that Federal reserves would be kept in good condition, and first concern of the Administration would be to keep Government credit unimpaired. Still earlier they were assured that President Roosevelt would maintain sound currency and the gold standard "at all hazards."

The reason we have a group today which the President has selected to call "Tories" is attributable to the extent to which promises and assurances have been ignored. Perhaps the group in much of its thinking deserves the title. On the question of money, nevertheless, it has both history and logic on its side. In view of this, it might be fitting to recall to President Roosevelt that even that great "experimenter" George Washington had Alexander Hamilton as Secretary of the Treasury.

$50,000 Value Turkey Crop In Shenandoah

Rockingham County Has Record Flocks; Farmers Regret Low Prices.

Winchester, Va., Nov. 19 (SPL)—More than $50,000 revenue is expected by turkey raisers of the West Virginia-Virginia section of the Shenandoah Valley within 50 miles of Winchester, from the first sale of their flocks, estimated at 25,000 birds, this week.

Turkey raising within the space of ten years has become one of the outstanding "money crops" of the farmers of this section. Although the price which the raisers hope to realize this year is far below the high figures of several years ago, farmers declare, the turkey is going a long way toward lifting them over this winter.

The 25,000 turkeys to go on the market this week and the first few days of next for Thanksgiving dinner, represents more than half the estimated 40,000 birds raised in the valley this year. The choice birds weigh from 16 to 24 pounds.

Eighteen cents is the top price for live turkeys. A number of flocks have been sold for 16 cents. The top price for live turkeys this season is about one-third of the 60 cents per pound paid several years ago.

Record Flocks in Rockingham. Harrisonburg, Va., Nov. 19 (SPL)—"Rockingham County has the largest crop of turkeys in its history," declared F. A. Carver, of the Carver Produce Co. "Unfortunately, the price is low, but the quality of the Thanksgiving bird remains high. Eggs are bringing from 4 to 5 cents per dozen more than last year. Turkeys are 3 cents lower."

Products of the Rockingham poultry farms take rank with Frederick County apple orchards from a money standpoint. Apples and poultry—not wheat and corn as in days gone by—bring into Shenandoah Valley the credits which enable the people of this section to pay for imports.

Pumpkin Cannery Busy. New Market, Va., Nov. 19 (SPL)—Fifty tons of pumpkins, put up into 20,000 cartons—enough for 2,000,000 pies—is this fall's output of the only cannery of its kind in this section of the Shenandoah Valley. It is in the little village of Maurertown, a few miles south of Strasburg, and is operated by Y. S. Schaeffer. It has been constantly expanding during the past four years. Its output this fall is the greatest in its history.

Shenandoah County Apples and also those of Frederick, Page and Rockingham have brought pumpkins to the cannery. The plant has been employing 15 workers for several weeks.

Stocks Close Little Changed After Week of Fluctuations

Confused Conditions Prevailing in Exchanges Influence Markets; Shares Refuse to Follow Rules on Dollar Rises and Falls.

New York, Nov. 19 (AP)—Financial markets were thoroughly confused by conditions in foreign exchange dealings this week.

Prices of shares and stocks fluctuated sharply at times, but ended the week with little change in the aggregate from last Saturday.

Business statistics were the most encouraging in weeks, indicating a cessation of the slackening of industrial output, which has been the way since July, but business trends were all but ignored by markets, which were anxiously trying to keep one eye on Washington and the other on the action of the dollar.

Dollar Out of Control. The dollar got out of control for a time, racing downgrade more rapidly, evidently, than the commodity price-lifting program had contemplated and disturbing the market for U. S. Government bonds.

This prompted the R. F. C. to cease raising its gold price after Tuesday, and the New York Federal Reserve Bank foreign exchange control has tightened to stem the outflow of capital. By the end of the week the dollar had recovered to the level indicated by the gold price set on Tuesday, and maintained the rest of the week.

The stock market, which according to the managed money theory was expected to advance when the dollar declined, seemed to have become nervous over inflation, declined when the dollar did, and rallied substantially when the dollar strengthened.

Price Index Up. The price index of 90 representative shares ended the week at 78.9, up 8 of one point, a negligible change for this tabulation. Russian recognition strengthened a few shares expected to benefit from better export business.

The action of commodities was mixed. Export staples such as cotton were helped on by the rise in the British pound sterling. The improvement in the dollar toward the close of the week turned some staples downward. Wheat, running into stop loss orders, broke sharply. The value of the dollar in terms of gold as measured by the R. F. C. gold price was reduced from slightly above 62 cents a week ago in terms of the dollar of the old parity, to 61.4 cents on Tuesday, at which level it remained for the best of the week. In terms of the French gold franc, however, it fell to 58.4, before recovering, to finish today just under 61.

The British pound sterling rose from $3.09 a week ago to a high of $3.82 on Thursday, then fell to $3.15, and ended the week at $3.24.

Direct Air Line Set For South America

New Orleans, Nov. 19 (AP)—Direct air transportation for passengers, express and freight from New Orleans to Central America will be effected early next year by the opening of a line from here to Panama City by Tropical Airways, Inc., according to President Ellis E. Boggs.

Flying directly South, the airplanes will shorten the distance between New York and Panama City to two days of flying. The proposed route calls for stops at Mexico City and Progresso in Mexico; Tegucigalpa, Honduras; Managua, Nicaragua; San Jose, Costa Rica, and David, Panama.

50 Selected Stocks Climb 4.85 Per Cent. New York, Nov. 19 (AP)—Paul H. Davis & Co. reports that the market value of 50 representative stocks on the New York exchange at the close of business yesterday was $12,620,238,875, an increase of 4.85 per cent over their value last week and up 31.03 since last year.

Missouri "Cashes In" on Beer. Jefferson City, Mo., Nov. 19 (AP)—Missouri collected $23,917.21 in inspection fees on beer during October, tax records revealed. The fee charged is 1 cent a gallon.

No definite action was taken until 1933, when at the District convention in Pottsville, Miss Anne V. Mann, who succeeded Mrs. Bolling as State president, appointed Mrs. J. B. T. Thornton, of Manassas, as chairman of the boulder committee.

Marker Is One of Series Planned for Jefferson Davis Highway.

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 19 (SPL)—At the point where U. S. highways Nos. 1 and 9 converge near Woodbridge, Va., the Fourth District of Virginia, United Daughters of the Confederacy tomorrow at 2 p. m. will dedicate a Jefferson Davis highway memorial boulder.

The memorial is one of six to be erected by each Virginia district unit of the U. D. C. through which a part of the Jefferson Davis highway passes, and one of numerous to be erected by similar units in other States.

The Rev. Mr. Langston, rector of Pohick Church, will deliver the invocation. Mrs. B. A. Blenner, Virginia U. D. C. director, will call upon Mrs. T. Elmer Woolf, chairman of the Fourth District, to unveil and present the boulder. Music will be furnished by the direction of Miss Virginia Nelson Spelden.

Henry G. Shirley, Virginia commissioner of highways, will accept the memorial in behalf of the State of Virginia. H. Thornton Davies will deliver the main address, dedicating the president of the Confederacy. The Rev. A. Stuart Gibson, chaplain of Ewell Church, will give the benediction.

Woodbridge was designated as the site for the boulder at the Fourth District convention in 1930 by Mrs. Charles E. Bolling, then president of the Virginia division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Germany's Trade With Latins Grows. Berlin, Nov. 19 (AP)—Germany had a favorable balance of trade with South America for the first half year of 1933, according to figures issued by the ministry of commerce.

Despite the trade advantage which depreciated currency gave Britain, Japan and the United States, German exports to South America greatly improved.

With the exception of Peru and Chile, the German export figures are much higher than for the corresponding period of 1932.

The following figures, in millions of marks, represent the value of German exports to South America in the two years:

	1932	1933
Argentina	27.8	42.5
Brazil	38.4	33.6

Bonds Revive Late in Week As Dollar Halts

Industrial News Ignored as Market Watches Foreign Exchange.

New York, Nov. 19 (AP)—Dollar weakness, with its inflationary symptoms, brought about a revival of prime investment bonds late in the week, but there were some late recoveries which followed reports that monetary stabilization was imminent.

The loan market generally ignored industrial developments as the American character of a rally on Friday as foreign currencies reacted sharply.

In addition to the stabilization possibilities, this list also probably reflected indications that Washington was taking steps to stem the flight of capital by tightening the restrictions on exchange transactions.

The Federal section came back moderately early in the week and the relief was widespread that the Reserve System had come to its support. The financial district was surprised, however, when the weekly figures of the Reserve banks disclosed they had purchased only $1,500,000 of Government obligations, the smallest aggregate in several months. Institutional and public buying, it was understood, was largely responsible for the resistance.

Banking Quarters Disturbed. Banking quarters were much disturbed by the recent decline of the Government. It was known that on December 15 the Treasury had $750,000,000 refunding operation and must borrow many millions more before the end of the month. There were conjectures as to whether interest rates, under the circumstances, might not be prohibitive, and rumors appeared of a possible issue of "greenbacks" to tide over the emergency.

Friday's reversal in the foreign exchange trend resulted in losses of 2 to as much as 13 points in obligations of France, Dutch East Indies, Switzerland, Poland and the United Kingdom. Most bonds of the continent on the week suffered net declines on the week despite their earlier buoyancy.

Highest grade corporation maturities were the principal sufferers, although they followed the Federales in the belated rally. The secondary groups were highly irregular. The rails showed the greatest recessions, with the utilities a close second. The industrials, as a whole, were not unusually heavy.

Traction Line Owned By Former Employees

Bakersfield, Calif., Nov. 19 (AP)—Bakersfield's city transit system is owned today by street-car motormen and bus drivers who once worked on the lines for wages.

The situation, believed to be unique in public service annals, developed when the San Joaquin Light & Power Corporation, former owner of the system, notified the California Railroad Commission it planned to abandon the system entirely.

The employees petitioned that the street car and bus lines be turned over to them to operate cooperatively. The request was granted. The employees selected a general manager and began operation of the lines, the profits to be paid to them as wages.

1,500 U. S. Advertisers Going to Paris Meet

Paris, Nov. 19 (AP)—Fifteen hundred American delegates will attend the International Advertising Congress to be held here in June, according to M. Charles Maillard, president of the French "Chambre Syndicale de la Publicite."

Gilbert T. Hodges, president of the Advertising Federation of America, on a recent visit here promised M. Maillard that he could count upon American advertising men taking active part in the 1934 congress.

Hodges will present the French advertising industry to the Advertising Federation of America, and its acceptance is practically assured beforehand.

Curb Trading Close Week of Indecision

Dealings Reach Average of 250,000 Shares; Oils Progress.

New York, Nov. 19 (AP)—Irregularly ruled the curb market last week as wild gyrations in foreign exchanges contributed to the indecision of traders. Price fluctuations were held within extremely narrow bounds during a brisk upturn that occurred late Tuesday.

Trading volume expanded substantially around midweek and total transfers were moderately in excess of the preceding week, averaging around 250,000 shares for each full five-hour session.

Oils receded mid progress but alcohol and utilities dribbled lower under quiet offerings. Metals shares slumped after early strengthening.

Gulf and Humble oils continued as favorites in the petroleum division while international petroleum also improved in considerable activity. Hiram Walker and Distillers Corporation-Seagrams led the repeat group lower and in the utility field, Bond & Share attracted substantial selling on omission of its common stock dividend.

Among industrial specialties Aluminum Co. of America fluctuated widely. Firms prevailed in the American Airlines and Swift International, among others.

New Stainless Steel Plant to Utilize Scrap

New York, Nov. 19 (AP)—A new entrant into the steel business of this country is announced with the formation, under the laws of Ohio, of Barium Steel Corporation, which for the first time in this country will produce stainless steel in open hearth furnaces from scrap by the use of the compound from which the new steel company derives its name. The new process permits the manufacture of stainless steel at a decidedly lower heat cost per ton, according to Lawrence K. Diefenderfer, president, who made public today the facts concerning the new industrial.

Diefenderfer was treasurer and director of the Vanadium Corporation of America for seven years and prior to that was an executive of the Lackawanna Steel Co., the American Iron and Steel Co., Empire Steel and the Wharton Steel Co. Charles E. Middleton, vice president, was formerly an executive of the Carnegie Steel Co., the American Steel and Wire Co. and the Penn-Seaboard Corporation. Lawrence C. Miller, secretary and treasurer, was formerly with the Vanadium Corporation, the American Concrete Products Co., Springfield Tire & Rubber, and is treasurer of the Core Joint Concrete Pipe Co. The consulting engineers include Otto Tischer, of Germany, an authority on furnaces, and Dr. Mahlon J. Rentscher, of Willoughby, Ohio, a banker who is also known as the foremost American authority on Barium products.

"Experiments conducted over an adequate period have conclusively demonstrated that stainless steel scrap can be successfully remelted in open-hearth furnaces," said Mr. Diefenderfer. "This represents a major achievement in lowering costs because under the patents and processes owned by the Barium Steel Corporation, stainless steel scrap should replace a large portion of the expensive chromium and nickel constituents. Further, the new process permits the rolling and finishing process by the use of Barium salts as a refining medium, because it results in a higher yield and unusual metallurgical qualities."

Gas Sale Pact Held Violated In Alexandria

Planning Body Protests Filling Station on Washington Street.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU, 907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va. Phone Alexandria 923.

The National Park and Planning Commission has written the Alexandria City Council, directing attention to the agreement of Alexandria and the Department of Agriculture, dated June 20, 1929, concerning erection of filling stations on Washington street.

This agreement was violated in permitting the erection of a station at Washington and Franklin streets, the commission states.

The letter also cites the lack of stop signs on streets running east and west from Mount Vernon Memorial boulevard.

City Manager Wallace Lawrence says these signs are provided for in the budget and will be erected shortly.

The suggestion is also made that stop signs be placed at King and Washington streets, on the east and west sides, to apply when the signal lights are not in operation.

Concert for Charity.

A concert will be given in the Alexandria Armory December 1 by the Boys Independent Band of Washington, when a charity offering will be taken for charity. Harvey Crump is chairman of the committee in charge, assisted by Thomas Chauncey, Charles C. Carlin, Jr., John W. Tulloch, Albert Muller and R. F. Dunn. Churches and civic organizations in the city are asked to cooperate.

Budget to Be Studied.

The Alexandria City Council will meet tomorrow night to consider the proposed 1934 budget, prepared by the city manager. This budget carries an appropriation of $669,546, an increase of $46,300 over 1933.

A conference will be held later on the school budget request. There are 400 items on the city budget, and after a public hearing will be called later.

Fathers to Organize.

Plans will be perfected Thursday night at a meeting in the Alexandria High School auditorium for an association of fathers of public school students. Henry T. Moncreu, principal of the Alexandria High School, started the movement.

Tobacco Delegation To Be Chosen Tomorrow

Delegates to the special session of the Maryland Legislature in behalf of farmers whose tobacco was destroyed in the State warehouse at Baltimore during the August flood, will be elected at a meeting tomorrow afternoon in Upper Marlboro.

The meeting will be under the auspices of the Southern Maryland Tobacco Growers Association. It is planned to petition the legislature to reimburse farmers who lost their crop on grounds that the State was negligent in locating the warehouses and that carelessness was shown in handling the tobacco.

Boys' Recreation Room In Hyattsville Near

A recreation center for boys will be opened soon after Thanksgiving in Hyattsville by the Associated Charities of Hyattsville and vicinity. It will be in the old Prince Georges County courtroom.

The recreation room is for boys who lack facilities for other forms of entertainment. Contributions solicited through Mrs. K. J. Morris.

Fairfax Grand Jury Sees Record—No Cases

The November term of Fairfax County Circuit Court will open this morning with an all-time record of no cases pending for consideration of the grand jury.

Approximately 12 criminal appeals from the county trial justice court await action. County officials indicated that the civil docket is also unusually light.

Arlington Plumbers to Meet.

J. Reed Salisbury, of the Department of Commerce sanitation division, will be the principal speaker tonight at a meeting of the Arlington County Master Plumbers Association in the Cherrydale Firemen's Hall. Motion pictures of the county sewage disposal plant will be shown.

Would Sell Trailer to Buy Food

The Lowery family in their ramshackle trailer at the tourist camp. They are willing to sell the crude abode, their only shelter, to get money for food. Photo shows Mr. and Mrs. Theodore J. Lowery and Theodore Jr., Patricia and Charles.

By the standards of charity organizations, Theodore J. Lowery is a man without a country; so his wife and three small children must suffer. He is neither Floridian (the family arrived here from Tampa last September) nor Washingtonian (although he was in business here 15 years) and so—

"Sorry," surrounded by his wife and their three children, he huddled together in the bulky yellow trailer which is their home, Lowery explained their plight yesterday. The trailer and their dilapidated sedan are parked at the tourist camp just a nibble from "F" fairway on the East Potomac links.

About a couple of weeks ago, when my asthma and heart trouble became so bad I couldn't go out, I went from place to place looking for work," he said. "There was nothing. My wife is not well. The children do not have sufficient clothing to be sent to school. We don't know where our next meal is coming from."

For 15 or 16 years, said Lowery, his poor health looks far less than his 55 years; he was in business here. An antique shop near Seventeenth and H streets, and later a jewelry establishment. From a musty drawer inside his mobile abode, he withdrew a weather-beaten ledger and said some of his patrons, names still high in society, politics and diplomacy.

In 1929, Crash Year, he had lost everything. When a friend raised enough funds to buy the ungainly trailer, Lowery hitched it to his old car and, with his family, set out in a futile quest to regain his health. They got as far as California. Last summer found the blighted family in Florida. Driven desperate by poverty, asthma, attacks which were becoming more frequent, and difficulty in obtaining charitable assistance because he was not a Floridian, Lowery set out for the Nation's Capital.

$3 Their Weekly Income.
Today you will find them on a lonely lot at the tourist camp, their forlorn place marked by two epic signs proclaiming the intersection of Maine and Kansas streets. Travelers' Aid is paying the $3 weekly parking fee, the couple said, but they have been unable to receive other aid because they are not District residents.

Lowery pensively fingered a reporter's badge as he told of vain attempts to find work—any work he could do, and at any wage.

"When I used to go out on stories," he reflected, "I never suspected I would be one myself."

He broke in as an office boy on the New York Journal during the Spanish-American War and later was taken on the editorial staff.

Listening attentively were Charles, 8, Patricia, 10, and Theodore, Jr., 12, whose rude garments belied their genteel behavior.

All three fairly overflew with "Excuse me's" as they moved about in the cluttered shack.

No School, so Dad Teaches.

If their father is unable to get a job or sell the trailer for enough money to get them out of the city, they will have to go to an institution. There, at least, their parents reluctantly admitted, they can have decent shelter and clothing and education. Unable to send them to school, Lowery has been teaching the children daily in arithmetic, spelling, writing and other elementary subjects.

A pince nez, good vocabulary and pleasant bearing lend him a close resemblance to the common conception of a male teacher. If the average male teacher owns a tuxedo suit, Lowery fills that requirement, too. It hangs unused in a closet, a moth-eaten memory of better days. No overcoat keeps it company and the weather is turning cold.

Farm Group Named For Prince Georges

To assist the Maryland Agricultural Advisory Council, Gov. Ritchie has appointed a subcommittee for Prince Georges County.

Members are W. E. Penn, Clinton; W. S. Hill, Upper Marlboro, and C. M. Roberts, Landover. W. E. Posey, county agent, will act as secretary for the committee.

Efforts will be made to scale down farm debts by helping farmers to take advantage of the Federal financing of farm mortgages.

Episcopalians At Silver Spring Plan Program

75th Anniversary Will Be Observed Sunday at Church.

With a picturesque and historic background the Silver Spring Parish of the Washington diocese will celebrate its seventy-fifth anniversary next Sunday at Grace Episcopal Church, Woodside. The present rector is the Rev. Frederick M. Morris, who came here about a year ago from the mission fields of Wyoming.

The Silver Spring Parish originally was a part of Rock Creek Parish, but was made independent in 1858. It was known at that time as Labyrinth Parish, because of its extensive territory, covering the now independent parishes of Bethesda, Fairland, Takoma Park and Kensington, in addition to the main church at Silver Spring.

Grace Church, the mother institution, was started just before the Civil War, but because of the many differences of opinion on civil and religious subjects held by the residents of the county during the war, the church was not completed until the conflict was over. Grace Church, therefore, is termed a monument to peace between the States.

During the pastorate of the first rector, the Rev. James Mackenbeim, the parishioners worshipped in a neighboring Methodist Church. During the service of the Rev. J. N. Wiley, who became rector in 1860, the rectory was built.

Growth Under Avirett.

The third rector, the Rev. James Battle Avirett, remained head of the parish for 18 years. He founded four missions, three of which became the parishes of Fairland, Takoma Park and Bethesda, with the fourth, St. Mary's Chapel, at Aspen, a part of the local parish. The Rev. Avirett had the support of two prominent men, who were practically assistant ministers. These were Montgomery Blair, postmaster-general of Lincoln's Cabinet, who was a practicing lawyer in Washington and represented the county in the general assembly, and Charles Abert, an attorney in Washington, whose farm is now the Manor Club. Throughout the history of the parish the family of former United States Senator Blair Lee, of Silver Spring, took an active part in church affairs.

Senator Lee's mother, the wife of Rear Admiral Samuel Phillips Lee, was prominent in the work of the Ladies' Guild and the family of Lee himself has been chairman of the vestry for a number of years.

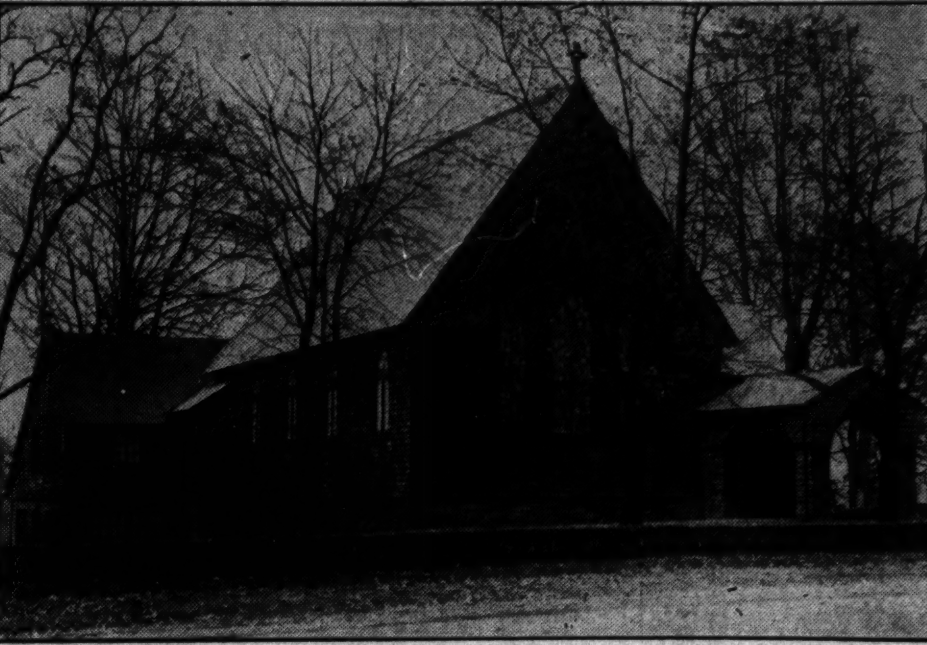

Succeeding the Rev. Avirett were the Rev. Robert Claiborne, the Rev. H. Allen Griffith, who has been secretary of the diocesan convention for many years, and Dr. John Aston Cooke Speeds.

Destroyed in 1895.

During choir rehearsal in 1895, while Dr. Speeds was rector, an oil lamp overturned, setting the church on fire. The building was entirely destroyed, together with most of the records of the parish. The church was rebuilt, with Bishop Saterlee laying the new corner stone.

After Dr. Speeds came the Rev. Thomas Green Faulkner, the Rev. Thomas D. Baker, the Rev. George H. McGrew, who died in 1917 while

Stout Timbers of Libby Prison Make a Barn on Indiana Farm

Visitors Still Go There to Recall Horrors of Civil War.

Hamlet, Ind., Nov. 19 (AP)—Tough timbers went into old Libby Prison, itself no chamber of ease, according to stories of Union Civil War prisoners.

Today, more than 40 years after the demolition of the one-time ship chandlery at Richmond, Va., erected throughout the North during the Civil War as a chamber of horrors, its timbers are still on active duty.

Carved with the initials of many a Northern war prisoner of the Confederacy, they form the beams and rafters of a peaceful Indiana barn.

On the farm of Frank Davis, rector of the local parish, and the Rev. T. J. Lafferty.

In 1920, the Rev. J. Henning Nelms, D.D., became rector, starting the Silver Spring Mission, which has developed into the Church of Ascension. He died in 1924 while serving the parish. During the rectorship of his successor, the Rev. Clyde Brown, the parish hall was built at St. Mary's Aspen at a cost of $16,000, and a large parish house at Grace Church, costing $20,000. The Rev. William R. Moody, who is now at St. Mark's Church, Washington, followed Dr. Brown and preceded the present rector.

At the 11 o'clock services the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D.D., Bishop of Washington, will deliver the sermon and confirm a class of 23 persons. Former United States Senator Blair Lee will make a short address on the early history of the parish. At 8 o'clock the choir will give a sacred cantata under the leadership of Mrs. Henry H. McKee, director of music at Grace Church.

Big Vote Urged In Arlington On Bond Issue

Sewer Project Believed Sure of Victory in Vote Today.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Tel. Clar. 509.

Confident of victory at the polls tomorrow on the $2,500,000 sewer bond issue, precinct workers met at the courthouse yesterday and perfected plans for getting out a record vote.

In each of the 11 voting precincts, committees were appointed and arrangements for automobiles to call for persons otherwise unable to reach the polls in time to vote.

George M. Yeatman, vice chairman of the citizens' committee presiding in the absence of Chairman Dr. Stacy T. Noland, called upon all workers to be at the polls, early and stay until they are closed.

He asserted no chances should be taken, as the opposition will be on hand and will keep busy the entire day.

Harry A. Fellows, chairman of the county board, announced that assurance has been given that all Government employees as well as those employed in private business houses in Washington will be given time off to vote.

Forest Fire Arouses Ft. Humphreys Troops

Fort Humphreys, Va., Nov. 19 (Sp.)—Called into an emergency conference by a radio from the commanding general of the Third Corps Area today, Col. Edward W. Schuit, commandant of the post, and his staff, estimated that an additional $300,000 could be spent in this vicinity for roads, trails, forestry, and game preservation.

This is in addition to the $2,500,000 already provided for the construction program.

Bishop Perry Tells Church's Gain in Orient

Episcopal Leader Talks of 4 Months' Tour in Far East.

Independent, self-supporting churches in both China and Japan are a possibility within 25 years, the Right Rev. James De Wolf Perry, Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church, declared yesterday in his first appearance in Washington Cathedral since his recent tour of the Orient.

Bishop Perry said the three most important phases of the foreign missionary movement are evangelization, education and the problem of missionary hospitals.

Referring to the first message sent by telegraph, "What Hath God Wrought," he said a similar miracle has been accomplished in the spreading of the mission of Christianity through the nations. Working against untold opposition, missionaries have set up schools, churches and hospitals and all that China knows today began with the education that Christianity has brought, he said.

"There is no hope for the reintegration of divided China except in the Christian compounds under the supervision of the brethren of the church," he said.

After a four months tour of the Orient, the bishop made an exhaustive study of missionary enterprises in response to a request of the National Council of the churches of his communion.

"Throughout all regions I visited I met young people in large assemblies," he said. "I talked with them in small groups and individually and I found the same persistent inquiry everywhere at work. The grip of loyalty to ancestral tradition renders the decision only the more serious and compelling."

The services were marked by the presence of 25 rectors of parishes throughout the diocese of Washington. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, read the lesson and the service was conducted by Canon Raymond L. Wolven, bishop's chaplain.

Mrs. Roosevelt To Speak Tonight

Tuberculosis Body Also to Hear Grace Abbott.

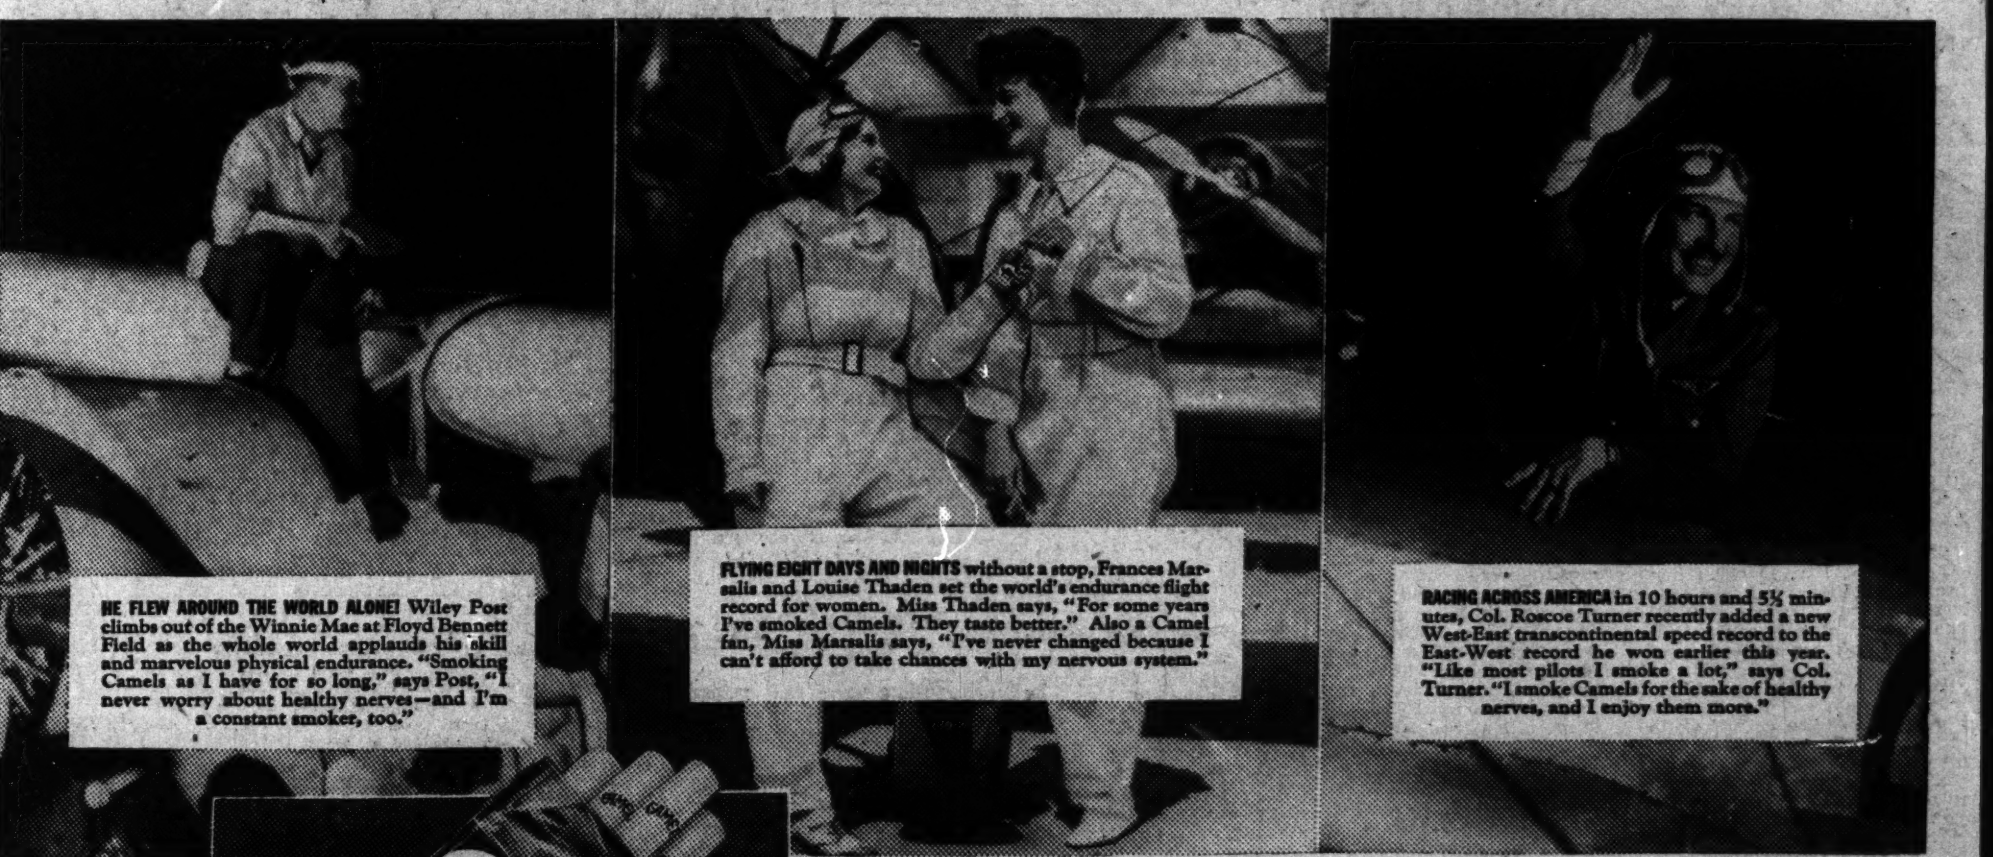

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be the principal speaker tonight at the annual public meeting of the District Tuberculosis Association at 7:45 at the Brookings Institution.

The program was to be by Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, on "Children of the Depression."

Other speakers will be Otto Wadsted, Danish Minister to the United States, and Dr. Kendall Emerson, managing director of the National Tuberculosis Association, of New York. Dr. William Charles White, president of the local association, will preside.

Volunteer ushers will be Miss Kathleen King, daughter of Senator William H. King; the Misses Helen and Jane Tewksbury, daughters of Dr. W. D. Tewksbury, and Mrs. Merrill S. Schow. The meeting is open to the public.

IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES TO BREAK RECORDS IN THE AIR!

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

Men and women who are famous for their brilliant flying agree about smoking and healthy nerves. "I never worry about healthy nerves," they say, "because I smoke Camels." They cannot afford to make a mistake in choosing their cigarette. They have to know. And it is more fun to know, because of the greater smoking pleasure they find in Camels. Camels are milder... better in taste. They leave no "cigarette" aftertaste. Change to Camels... and see for yourself that they do not get on your nerves or tire your taste!

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW
Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Chest Drive Pleas Voiced From Pulpits

Curley, Freeman and Officials of District Espouse Cause.

Congregations Called on for Support on Eve of Campaign.

Powers spiritual and temporal yesterday appealed to the heart of Washington on behalf of the Community Chest whose annual drive for funds opens officially at 12:15
p. m. today, with a report meeting in the Willard Hotel.

Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, Bishop James E. Freeman of Washington, scores of other clergymen, and the new District Commissioners all espoused the Chest drive.

Archbishop Curley's aid was extended in a special letter read in Washington Catholic churches yesterday at all masses. In addition to calling for "whole-hearted" support of the Chest, the Archbishop asked members of the clergy to volunteer their services wherever they are needed in the campaign. Permission was also given for the display of Community Chest posters in the vestibules of the churches.

Speaking from the pulpit of St.
John's Episcopal Church, Bishop Freeman said: "The economy of the Chest, in economy of service, and in economy of action, the Community Chest grows in deserved favor and popularity with each succeeding year."

60 Agencies Benefit.

"I wish to give unqualified indorsement to efforts being made through the Community Chest to maintain the 60 philanthropic and character-building agencies throughout the city," Bishop Freeman told his congregation. "Apart from financial support given these vitally important agencies, this annual effort constitutes the finest expression of the unity of our life and inspires a fellowship that finds its practical issue in serving human needs."

The Community Chest has proven to be the "most economical and effective way of financing" welfare and charitable organizations. District Commissioners said in issuing their proclamation urging citizens to support the drive.

In the First Congregational Church, Dr. Allen A. Stockdale said, in reference to the Chest:
"This necessity is pronounced enough to challenge the whole city.
Its fruits are far reaching enough to bless the whole city. Its failure would involve the social welfare of the whole city. Its success will in a magnificent way render loving, brotherly service to the needs of the whole city."

Many Churches Assist.

Other Protestant churches marked the opening of the drive with special sermons on the Chest, mention of the drive in sermons, and addresses by lay speakers of the Chest campaign unit. Among these churches and the speakers appearing were:

St. Margaret's Episcopal, Albert
W. Atwood; Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal, W. W. Wheeler; Holy Comforter Episcopal, Evaris J.
Wag; Good Shepherd Episcopal,
Ray H. Everett; Nativity and Resurrection Episcopal, John M. Stockdale; St. Andrews Episcopal, Howard Baker; St. Columba's Episcopal, Dr.
Herbert Day; Ascension Episcopal, Theodore Johnson; Brightwood
Methodist Episcopal, Thomas S.
Settle; Cavalry Methodist Episcopal, Charles Prettyman; Chevy Chase Baptist, Thomas E. Lodge; Christ Episcopal, Dr. Edward Orthodox, Harold B. Stabler; H Street Christian, James DeForce; Langdon Methodist Episcopal, Bert Holmes; Lewis Memorial Methodist Protestant, Col. George R. Laird; Mount Taber Methodist Protestant, Dwight Scott; National City Christian, E. Claude Babcock; Ninth Street Christian, Adjt. Gilbert S.
Decker; Our Savior Episcopal, Earl
A. Nash; St. John's Georgetown,
Elmer Louis Kayser; St. Mark's United Lutheran, W. O. Hillbilde, and Trinity Episcopal, Takoma Park, Joseph E. Dayton.

Type of Work Cited.

Examples of the type of work done by Chest agencies was recited by Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney, pastor of the Church of the Covenant, in his sermon on the drive yesterday morning. He extolled the mental and spiritual help given by these agencies to Washington's needy.

The Commissioners' proclamation, after setting forth the needs and benefits of the Chest, concluded:

"We, the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia, urge upon all citizens who have work and income to give to the full extent of their ability to the Community Chest of Washington, D. C., to the end that during the year 1934 the human needs of the National Capital may be properly served by the Community Chest's member organization and the present and future welfare of our city conserved."

Quentin Roosevelt Recalled By Gift to Toy and Doll Fund

Memory of White House Boy Honored; Little Dogs Send $1.

A gift came to The Post Toy and Doll Fund last night in memory of a White House boy of yesterday, Quentin Roosevelt, son of President and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, who died in the World War, fighting the foe in the air.

The contribution was simply marked "Quentin Roosevelt." But it will recall to many a Christmas morning in the Executive Mansion 23 years ago when Quentin, the pride, pet and the youngest of the Roosevelt children and the idol of White House attaches, found his fondlest wish had been granted by St. Nicholas in the form of an electric railroad, equipped and ready to run.

In far away France, Quentin Roosevelt, in his early 20's, fell shot down by an enemy airplane.
Yet some one who remembered the gay little lad, a Force School pupil and leader of the "White House Gang" which included Charlie Taft, son of a later President, and other boys of well-known families, sent in the gift in his memory. With it came the hope that this memorial gift might inspire other relatives and friends of Washington boys who gave their lives in the World War to remember them by doing their part in seeing that no boy or girl in this city is without a real Christmas.

Toys Must Be Separate.

And what, to a child, is Christmas without a toy? True, good Uncle Sam will see that all the children of the city are warm, fed and clothed. But, with the dollar dancing about so strangely on the market of the world, Uncle Sam can not provide for a single toy out of the people's money. That's the reason for The Post Toy and Doll Fund.

The city welfare and relief agencies show the need of relief is greater this year because of unemployment and because saving have been exhausted through the continuing depression. Therefore, the resources of The Post Toy and Doll Fund will be a welcome aid in meeting the problem of delivered toys. Ding-How reported a contribution yesterday from Puggie and Trixie, of Mechanicsville, Md., who sent in a dollar as their mite to the fund. With the gift came a letter, as follows:

"P. S. Trixie is the dog setting up with the glasses and the other one is Puggie, her son. They both want to do some child that is poor.
Hoping the enclosed $1 will be a help."

Ding-How Gratified.

Ding-How was delighted with the gift, so much that he made no comment on Trixie wearing Organs, which he has long considered his own special editorial prerogative among the pets of the city.

Today will begin the second week of The Post Toy and Doll Fund.
Its managers realize many who will later help the Toy Fund are busy with Community Chest campaign and Red Cross Roll Call efforts.
They wish all kind of good luck to these notable endeavors to aid the need of the city and do not expect the Toy Fund to grow greatly until after Thanksgiving. But every dollar given now makes the final goal more assured.

So send in your gift today. Mark it for "The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund." It will be published in these columns in recognition of your kindness and as an inspiration to others to do likewise.

Bill Would End Coroner's Job

Medical Examiner Asked Instead, Abolishing Inquest Jury.

A bill, providing for the substitution of a medical examiner for the office of coroner and the elimination of the coroner's jury in the District, will be submitted this week to Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, by Corporation Counsel
William W. Brice.

The proposal was suggested by Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, former chairman of the board of District Commissioners, several months ago. Senator King has shown an interest in the plan, which is modeled after the New York City system.

The bill would authorize the commissioners to appoint a chief examiner and two assistants, who would investigate "all essential facts" in sudden deaths, and report the findings to the United States Attorney's office.

The medical examiner would be relieved of legal authority now exercised by the coroner in conducting inquests. He would have power, however, to summon witnesses and obtain evidence.

School Presents History of Treaty

Franco-American Pact of 1763 to Be Discussed.

The 150th anniversary of the signing of the first treaty between the young American republic and France in 1763 will be celebrated tonight at Catholic University with talks on the historical background of the treaty.

The Most Rev. James H. Ryan, rector of the university, will open the program, which is given by the department of politics. Andre de Laboulaye, French Ambassador to this country, will make the chief address.

Other speakers will be Dr.
John J. Meng, of the faculty of the department of politics, and Miss Elizabeth Kite, archivist of the American Catholic Historical Society.

Mr. Keogh Bobs Out of Bed To Solve a Spooky Puzzle

Question: To Whom Does
A Stolen (and Occupied) Casket Belong?

A telephone call at daybreak brought a delicate question to the ears of Assistant District Attorney Michael Keogh. It seems the police of Precinct No. 4 were holding a casket on a charge of theft of a casket, that the casket had subsequently come to contain a corpse, and please Mr. Keogh, should they also hold the casket as evidence, and if so, what should they do with it?

Well, Mr. Keogh, whose ears were yearning to return to a blissful Sunday morning pillow, decided that question briskly and with just a touch of acerbity.

By all means, he urged Capt.
Jeremiah Sullivan, return the casket to the undertaking establishment to which the prisoner had sold it. It is a matter of record that the assistant district attorney's interrupted slumber was disturbed thereafter by thoughts of that casket and its contents being carried into Police Court as evidence at the prisoner's trial.

The prisoner in question is Thomas Jackson, 36, colored, of No.

Catholic Rite Opens New D. C. Church

800 Honor Guests Hear
Rev. M. J. Riordan
Give Address.

Rev. Cavanagh, Pastor, Host to Visitors at Banquet.

Describing the church as a stepping stone between earth and heaven, the Rev. Michael J. Riordan, pastor of St. Martin's Church, yesterday addressed more than 800 honor guests, visiting clergy and parish members at the dedication of the Church of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin in Congress Heights.

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, archbishop of Baltimore, officiated at the services. A solemn high mass opened the ceremonies, with the Right Rev. Mgr. Cornelius F.
Thomas, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, as celebrant. He was assisted by the Rev. Edward P. Mc-Adams, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, as deacon, and the Rev.
Joseph V. Buckley, pastor of St.
Francis Xavier Church, as sub-deacon.

Father Riordan spoke on "The Parish Church, a Storehouse for Spiritual Energy." He explained the significance of the rites of the seven sacraments and told how each would be administered in the new church.

"Channel of God's Grace."

"This church will be for you who live in its parish the ordinary and regular channel for God's grace to your own soul and the souls of your dear ones," he declared.

Archbishop Curley was assisted in the ceremonies by the Very Rev.
Anthony Vieban, S. S., and the Rev. Dr. Paul Furley, Ph. D. The Very Rev. Francis Hartry, of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, acted as master of ceremonies.

Members of the Knights of Columbus, the Catholic Daughters of America, the Holy Name Society, the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and the Curley Club, of which organizations the Rev. Francis X.
Cavanagh, pastor of the new church, is chaplain, were given places of honor in the church.

Knights Are Honor Guard.

Washington General Assembly, Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus, served as a guard of honor to Archbishop Curley. Among the honor guests were the Rev. Mgr.
Eugene Connelly, pastor of St. Peter's; Mgr. Harry Quinn, pastor of the Cathedral of the Assumption in Baltimore; the Very Rev. Anthony Vieban, S. S., president of the Sulpician Seminary of Catholic University; the Rev. Patrick Conroy, pastor of St. Anthony's; the Rev. James Connell, pastor of the Holy Name Church, and the Rev.
Paul Furley, professor of sociology at Catholic University.

An augmented choir under the Rev. George Bowling, assistant pastor of the church, furnished music.
A banquet was tendered the members of the visiting clergy by Father Cavanagh, immediately after the services.

Father Cavanagh, who had been

10 of 11 Anti-Nazi Marchers in Jail

'Chain' Girl Among Those Failing to Get Bail.

Ten of 11 marchers who participated in Saturday's anti-Nazi demonstration in front of the German Embassy remained in Second Precinct cells last night. Arrested for parading without a permit, they probably will be arraigned in Police Court today.

William L. Gray, one of the group who marched under the auspices of the Communist party in Washington in protest against the "Nazi murderers," furnished his $100 collateral and was released.

Sylvia Roth, 18, 1024 Sixth street

stration, and her two companions, Charles Spencer, 25, and Sidney W.
Phillips, 21, same address, were

Minister Deplores
Soviet Antireligion

"We may recognize Russia, but God save us from a Russianized religion!" said the Rev. John Compton Ball last night at the Metropolitan Baptist Church. "Who, today, wishes to live where there is no
church?"

In defining his theme, "The Worth-While Church," Dr. Ball expressed belief the church is not a place for amusement.

"It can not compete with the theaters," he said. "Not that it ignores headful pleasures, amusements, and social gatherings, but these are secondary."

Economy Act Hits Science Staff of U. S.

Chemical Group Seeks to Restore Men in Laboratories.

Summary of Slashes Reveal Scores Dropped.

Surveys of financial retrenchment in Federal establishments reveal "the wings of scientific service have been clipped," Otto Wilson, of the American Chemical Society, reported yesterday.

Several hundred scientists have been dismissed or indefinitely furloughed under sharply reduced appropriations, the study disclosed.
Society officers were distressed by the personnel slashes and plan to seek enlargement of skeleton research staffs when additional Government funds become available.

Wilson's summary of economy reductions included:

Dropping of 65 from the staff of the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, Department of Agriculture.

Dismissal of 22 employees by the Food and Drug Administration, including several chemists.

Elimination of leucose production work at the Bureau of Standards, with separation of three chemists from food and drug operations.

The goal of this program was to lay the foundation for a new American industry for production of leucose sugar from Jerusalem artichokes.

Laboratory Is Closed.

Shutting of the photographic emulsion laboratory at the Bureau of Standards, with elimination of three chemists.

Reduction of 50 per cent in the organic and fibrous materials research of the Bureau of Standards.

Reduction of 70 per cent of funds for the fuels laboratory of the Bureau of Mines.

Dropping of all research on testing methods at the Bureau of Standards paper division. Sharp reduction in the work on soil pollution, with the dropping of seven chemists and 70 per cent in researches dealing with lubrication and liquid fuels.

Elimination of experiments on plastic materials in the leather section, with the loss of four workers.

Removal of the organic chemical laboratory of the Bureau of Mines at Pittsburgh, with the loss of three chemical specialists.

Many Chemists Dropped.

Reduction of the staff of the explosives laboratory of the Bureau of Standards by five chemists and virtual elimination of research work. The appropriation was reduced by 50 per cent.

Dropping of three trained chemists from the staff of the Bureau of Mines physical chemistry laboratory at Bartlesville, Okla. A study of manufacturing motor fuels from natural gas abandoned. Closing of a petroleum research laboratory at Laramie, Wyo., and dropping of three chemists at the California laboratory.

Dropping one research associate from the chemical staff of the Bureau of Fisheries and suspension of seasonal work.

Closing down of investigations by the Bureau of Animal Industries, including curtailment of a poison weed study in Texas reported to have been started after the weeds killed 300,000 sheep in 1931.

Bride to Offer Crawford Case 2 Rum Control Aids Address Bills to Public Mass Meeting

Seeks Suggestions Before They Go to Congress for Action.

Corporation Counsel William W.
Bride will ask the District Commissioners to make public the two bills he has prepared for liquor control in the District when he submits them the latter part of this week.

"These bills are something to be shot at," he said yesterday. "I want the public to see them before they are submitted to Congress so that they may offer any suggestions for alterations."

Bride tomorrow will confer with representatives of the Anti-Saloon League and later with the head of the local Crusaders. He expects to submit the bills to the commissioners Friday.

Dispensaries Provided

The proposed legislation offers alternatives of a general licensing system and a modification of the Quebec government dispensary system.
After the commissioners pass on the measure, they will be forwarded to Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, and Representative Norton, chairman of the House District Committee. Hearings will be held, probably not before the latter part of December or the first of January, as it is doubtful whether quorums will be in Washington before that time.

Three Sides to Be Given.

Wet, dry and legal views on the controversial question will be aired tonight at the meeting of the Mon-

Vernon E. West, assistant corpo-

Anti-Saloon League of the District, will outline the dry views. The Prohibition Reform.

Papal Infallibility Doctrine Explained

Catholic Declares Bible Can't Interpret Itself

The Catholic doctrine of papal infallibility was explained yesterday by Edward Heffron, director of program, National Catholic Hour, speaking at the outdoor meeting of the Catholic Evidence Guild in Franklin Park.

"Without an infallible interpreter, Christ's revelation is inexplicable and meaningless," he said. "Fundamentalists accept the Bible as the sole rule of faith; and modernists, by and large, accept science. But neither can science authoritatively interpret the Bible, nor the Bible interpret itself."

John J. O'Connor, a member of the faculty of Georgetown University, and H. H. Hartman, local attorney, also spoke. Mr. O'Connor addressed the meeting on "Catholic Unity," and Mr. Hartman spoke on "The Catholic Church and Miracles."

District Work Shown as Aid To 28 States

Only Fifth of Capital Construction Costs Spent Here.

Ickes Given Data in Plea for Municipal Center Allotment.

The rest of the country derives more profits and jobs out of public building projects in Washington than the residents of the city according to an analysis of expenditures for the proposed Municipal Center made public yesterday by District officials.

The breakdown showing where the money expended for the Center would go was prepared to meet objections from Public Works Administration officials that Washington already was getting more than its share of unemployment relief through the public building program.

Request for allotment of $5,400-000 for construction of the first unit of the Municipal Center has been pending before the Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes for some time, with Maj. John C. Gotwals, Engineer Commissioner, and Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the Senate
District Committee, pressing for favorable action.

Less Than Million in District.

Analysis shows that of the $5,400-000 which would be expended for the first Center unit less than $1,000,000 would be expended in the District including profits of the interior Harold L. Ickes for some time, with Maj. John C. Gotwals,
Engineer Commissioner, and Senator William H. King (Democrat),
of Utah, chairman of the Senate
District Committee, pressing for favorable action.

Against the $1,000,000 which would be expended in the District something like $335,000 would be paid railroads in freight charges.
According to the breakdown, it would go to business firms in other communities scattered through 28 States.

Division of Expenditures.

Indiana, assuming use of limestone, and Pennsylvania would get the largest amounts out of the project according to the breakdown.
Estimates of the amounts which would be expended in other States follows:

District College Grid Teams Have But One Victory to Show for Week's Play

Maryland U. Team Lone Winner

Old Liners End Losing Streak at Expense of Johns Hopkins.

T WAS a sad, sad week-end for Washington's college football teams, which, with but a single exception, returned home empty handed from the hunt. George Washington sounded off Friday night, accepting its annual drubbing from Tulsa in an exciting game. Catholic U., a top-heavy favorite, was victimized by a muddy field and some young men of Manhattan, who were playing their final game for old alma mater.

Playing its best football of the season, Georgetown was just good enough to hold Carnegie Tech's baggage tooters to 19 points, a moral victory, albeit the fifth defeat, for Jack Hagerty's henchmen. Maryland saved this area from a complete white washing by soundly trouncing its old rival, Johns Hopkins, at Baltimore. Gallaudet closed its campaign in negative fashion at Kendall Green, losing to Shepherd College in another bitterly fought game.

Tulsa Line Powerful.
George Washington couldn't cope with Tulsa and the jinx that accompanied the Golden Hurricane, and so it lost for the fourth year in succession. Tulsa boasted a strong line, possibly the best encountered by G. W. this season. It also had some fast, elusive backs who didn't stop driving until downed by three or four Colonials.

George Washington waited for Tulsa to pull some of its widely publicized tricks, but "Gloomy Gus" Henderson's men decided they didn't need to. Tulsa was smart enough to weaken G. W.'s defense when within scoring distance, simply by sending the ends out to the extreme sides of the field. It was necessary for the Colonial secondary to spread-eagle to protect this territory, and when they did it was comparatively easy for the westerners to split either tackle wide open for appreciable gains.

Second Guessers Busy.
The kibitzers, who insisted on running both teams from the safety of the grandstand, blame Ben Plotnick, G. W.'s quarterback, for poor judgment in the first period when with the ball in his team's possession on the 40-yard line, fourth down and a yard to go, he elected to try the end run. A wasn't very sound football, true, but it wasn't sound football two years ago when Tulsa pulled a fake kick on its own goal-line, and tossed a pass that netted a touchdown.

Plotnick gambled with fate—and lost. Had the play succeeded, he would have been a hero. Catholic U. outplayed Manhattan by a comfortable margin, amassing 11 first downs to its hosts' 4, and outgaining Meehan's men from scrimmage 154 yards to 112, but they lost the ball game just the same. It was an inspired Manhattan eleven, coached to fighting frenzy by their coach before the start of the game. A snow matted the field, that slowly dissolved into mud, was an accessory to the New Yorkers' victory.

Auguster Blamed.
Genie Auguster, C. U.'s quarter back, indirectly was responsible for the defeat. He was playing safely on the defense, when Welch got a long punt that came to earth on the 15-yard line and started to roll goalward. Auguster elected to block an oncoming Manhattan player rather than run the ball, and his strategy worked, for the oval rolled into the end zone and Catholic took the ball on its own 10-yard line. A few minutes later Welch again punted and Auguster tried the same trick. It failed, however, when mud stopped the piskin on the 4-yard line, where C. U. was obliged to put it in play.

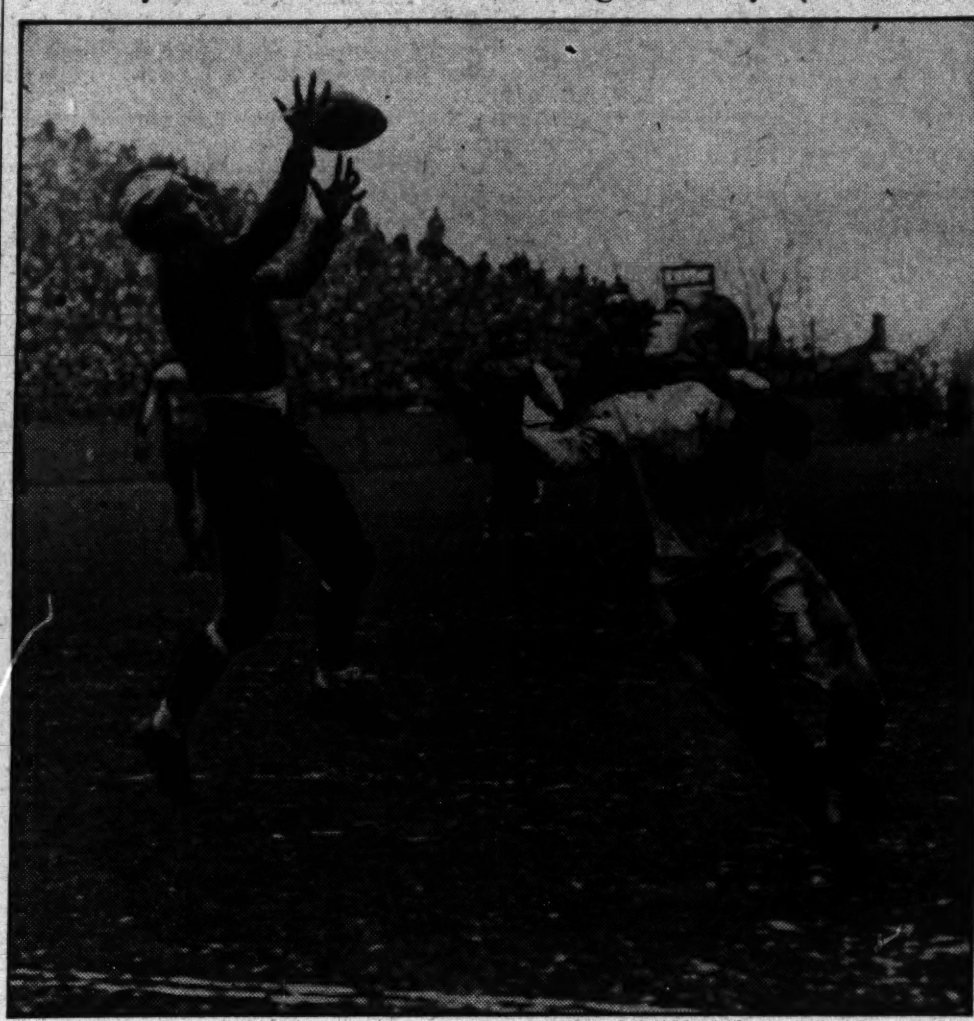

A bad kick by Oliver and a subsequent pass and line buck by Manhattan produced the winning touchdown. C. U. almost got back in the game when Tom Gearty was inserted in the line-up with instructions to peg the leather. He did, but the receivers neglected to catch the passes, a trivial matter, but it cost the Cardinals a tie at least.

G. U. Line Play Good.
Georgetown's line play was a tribute to "Mush" Dunsen, the retiring chap, who assists in coaching the forwards. The forwards were charging hard and low, especially Katalinas, who was outstanding with his excellent all-round work.

Georgetown's interference made the mistake of following the ball carrier too well. The lads paving the way, or who were supposed to pave the way, didn't hit Carnegie players hard enough to even slow them down. They seemed to wait for the big Plaid linemen, contenting themselves with an easy, worthless block. Carnegie used its reserves as much as possible, or virtually the entire game, and the boys looked a trifle green in spots, but showed enough to warrant the prediction that Carnegie is going to be tough again next season.

After stumbling around all season, Maryland's sophomores finally got their bearings and polished off Hopkins in traditional style. The Medicos were much in Maryland's class, and it must have been with a sigh of relief that the Terps lined up for the kick-off, knowing that they were at least an even choice to win.

They Shall Not Pass, According to Lafayette Back

Leaping high into the air, Miller, of Lafayette, is seen with fingers tense about to intercept a Columbia pass virtually over the goal line at New York Saturday as a Columbia receiver waits in vain, with arms outstretched, for the ball to come out of the air.

C. U. Basketers Practicing Daily

Official Drills, However, Still a Week Off.

ALTHOUGH basketball practice will not be officially launched until next week, candidates for Catholic University's court team are going through their paces in the Brookland gym daily. The Cards expect to produce a winning quintet this season, as the only loss last year was to the team that won the national championship, the University of Chicago. The team is coached by Coach John J. McLaughlin, who is a former player of the team.

Games with V. P. I., Western Maryland, Loyola of Baltimore and Maryland feature the schedule. Maryland will be met February 2 at College Park.

Cleveland Tops 135-Pound Elevens

Official Drills, However, Still a Week Off.

CLEVELAND A. C. swung into first place in the 135-pound division of the National Capital City League yesterday by defeating Apache Preps, 6 to 0. The lone score of the contest came in the second quarter when Lee Duval, right guard, recovered a fumble behind Apache's goal line after an Apache back had dropped Williams' long spiral kick. Unable to pierce the Cleveland line, Apache Preps resorted to the air in the final quarter, but alert tackling prevented them from scoring.

Cleveland A. C. has won five tied one and lost one. Northwest Boys Club is entrenched in second place.

Northeast Boys Win at Annapolis

Official Drills, However, Still a Week Off.

The Northeast Boys Club gridded, unbent and untied this season and now leading in the 135-pound division of the National Capital City League, today won a thriller from the Annapolis Cardinals, 2 to 0. It was the first defeat for the home team in two seasons.

The Northeast Boys scored a safety in the first period when an Annapolis punter, kicked from behind his goal, stepped back of the end zone.

Both teams were particularly strong on defense and the game resolved itself into a tight battle of straight football. The entire Northeast Boys team played an outstanding game, with Fisher, Reed and L. Stasuloff starring.

Passers Beaten, 10-7, In Charlotte Contest

Official Drills, However, Still a Week Off.

Charlotte N. C., Nov. 19 (AP). The Charlotte Panthers whipped the Washington Passers, 10 to 7, here this afternoon. Washington scored its touchdown on an intercepted pass. The Panthers crossed the goal line on a pass from Dunlap to Steele. Copeland kicked a field goal, which placed the home team ahead.

Fraters Beaten By Mohawks, 32 to 6

Official Drills, However, Still a Week Off.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Nov. 19 (Sp.).—The Alexandria Fraters were defeated by the Washington Mohawks here this afternoon, 32-6. The Mohawks eleven is the only team that has defeated the Fraters in the last three seasons, twice in three weeks, having defeated them at Griffith Stadium, 6-0.

It was a case of just too much manpower in today's game. "Snail" Delabre punched the Fraters for gains ranging from 2 to 10 yards, every time he carried the ball. Parks and Byrne also tore off many gains through the Fraters' line.

ALTHOUGH outwitted by many pounds, a fast Marion eleven defeated the Maryland A. C. by the score of 6 to 0, before 2,000 fans at the Griffith Stadium yesterday in an unlimited class National Capital League game.

The only score of the game came in the first quarter, as the result of a 10-yard pass from Bergling to Hooff and who ran 20 yards to the goal line. Padgett missed the extra point.

It seemed as though Marion defense was not strong enough to hold the heavy Marylanders at the start, but as the game progressed the Marions grew stronger.

The big event of the game was a Maryland A. C. standpoint as when Dugan made a brilliant broken field run of 75 yards taking the ball to the 10-yard line, but the Marions' defense held.

In fact, the Marylanders were within 5 yards of the goal line, but the Marions' defense could not break through the solid Marion line.

Collere and Dugan starred for Marylanders with their strong defensive work. Shore and Hughes stood out for the Marions.

The Marions, who by virtue of the victory, took the Maryland A. C. for first place, have two more championship games, with Seamen Gulls and Mercury A. C.

St. Rita in Tie Game.

Official Drills, However, Still a Week Off.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Nov. 19 (Sp.).—St. Rita's A. C. and the Delta Sigma Nu eleven fought to a scoreless tie today. St. Rita's scored what many thought would be the winning touchdown when Morgan grabbed a pass and rushed 80 yards to the goal line, but one of St. Rita's players was holding and the ball was returned to that point and Referee Coban dealt a 15-yard penalty. Neither team threatened to score during the remainder of the game.

Dunbar, Armstrong In Colored Title Play

Official Drills, However, Still a Week Off.

The colored South Atlantic title and the city high school championship will be at stake this afternoon at 3 o'clock at Walker Stadium when Dunbar and Armstrong eleven clash, each having scored a victory over Cardozo.

The Dunbarites, who have held the title in recent years, are expected, on their season's record, to maintain their status, but expect the opposition to be of decidedly determined character.

George Diffebaugh Shoots 69 in Match

Official Drills, However, Still a Week Off.

George Diffebaugh, the abbreviated Indian Spring professional, negotiated his home course in 63 shots, two below par, yesterday. Diffebaugh teamed with Tom Moore to defeat the trio of Roger Peacock, Louis Fuchs and Dr. Howard Smith by 2 to 1.

Scoring birdies on the seventh and ninth, Diffebaugh toured the first nine in 33, two below par. He was over on only one hole—the eleventh. Peacock shot a 75.

Palace Downs Mercury, 2-0, In Thriller

Official Drills, However, Still a Week Off.

SAFETY scored five minutes before the end of the game as the Palace defeated Mercury A. C.'s 2-0 in a thriller yesterday at Gonzaga Field in a contest that bristled with action from start to finish.

"Fats" Webb, 165-pound Mercury half back, attempted to kick out of danger, standing near his goal post. He got off the kick successfully, but he punted two Palace players charged in, and Webb stepped before the end zone. The referee gave Palace a safety on the play.

Most of the play during the first quarter was in midfield with two stout line battles desperately. In the second quarter, Palace made a concerted drive with a land and air attack, and reached the Mercury 1-yard line, only to be held for downs.

Palace opened up a passing attack in the third quarter, Tooker making two successful passes that netted about 25 yards.

In a 30-yard drive, late in the fourth quarter, the Palace players steamed down the field to Mercury's 1-yard line. Tonker, Johnny Scanlon and Dearborn alternating in carrying the ball. Again Mercury's line braced and held for downs. Then followed Webb's ill-fated kick that led to the safety. J. Scanlon and Tooker starred for the victors, with Zumba, Thompson and Lewis playing outstanding ball for Mercury.

British United Upset Soccer Victims

Official Drills, However, Still a Week Off.

THE grocery boys started with a dash that completely surprised the English kickers, and before they realized it, a tally had been chalked up against them. Shelton and Fitzpatrick teamed well to score the opening goal. The latter passed neatly to Shelton, who drove the sphere past Coleman.

The half ended with the score standing 1 to 0, but with the victors still pressing. Louis Mitchell was cleverly assisting Shelton and Fitzpatrick in the attack on the British goal, while Randolph Mitchell, Gunton, and Ordway were driving off all threats made by the United.

British in Late Rally.
Both Fitzpatrick and Shelton scored in the second half, each time teaming together to earn the goal. Until the last 10 minutes, play was mainly in British territory, but at this juncture the vanquished eleven found itself and peppered the Mitchell uprisings with shots, but was unable to break through.

Johnny Malloch, although his team was defeated, clearly demonstrated that he is still the best outside right in the city. Jack Turner and Jess Burton also did yeoman service for the Britishers, who can blame their defeat on overconfidence, such as anything else.

Rockville defeated the Georgetown Americans, 3 to 1; Brandynville took a 1 to 0 forfeit from Galitersburg, in their Capital City League games.

New York Avenue stopped Takoma Park, 4 to 1, and Virginia Avenue surprised the Dux with a 1-0 victory in Recreation League games.

"Cap" Stubbs His Money's Worth! By Edwin

Walt Mason, Himself

Pioneers.
Where now the shining autos scot across the prairie soil, where stately locomotives toot, the ox teams used to toil. The prairie schooner used to creak through sun-shine, storm and rain, upon its way, week after week, where runs the palace train. We whiz across the plains and hills, 400 miles a day, and grumble at the little ills we know upon the way. We have our meals at stated times, we sleep on downy beds, but we lament, in prose and rhymes, the grief that bows our heads. We know not what discomfort means, in these soft-padded days, but someone's always spilled the beans, and protests loud we raise. Our train was 20 minutes late, we found a tire gone flat; and so we uprear and orate, and lecture through a hat. I think about the pioneers, the prairie schooner boys, who crossed the plains in bygone years, and raised no doleful noise. And so they struggled week by week, through perils, uninsured; they would have been ashamed to speak of fleabites they'd endured.
